A Million Extra Homes Urged In Region By 1990

The first regional look at Bay Area housing—indicating a need for more than a million new units by 1990—has been completed by the Association of Bay Area Governments.

Marin will need more than 71,000 new units and Sonoma, more than 89,000 during the next 20 years, according to the report.

The report indicated that while housing is usually a local concern, a study of commute patterns and intercounty moves by Bay Area families indicates the housing market is a regional one.

Of 56,807 workers living in Marin in 1965, 37.7 per cent were employed in one of the eight other Bay Area counties. Obly 9.9 per cent of Sonoma's 49,696 employed residents worked in another Bay Area county, the report showed.

The Bay Area has fewer substandard dwelling units than the nation as a whole, the report said, primarily because there are fewer older structures.

According to the 1960 census, Marin had 3,888 deteriorating dwelling units and 1,201 dilapidated out of a total of 49,560, while Sonoma had, with 59,784 units, had 7,929 in the first category and 2,436 in the second — the highest percentage of all nine counties.

The report indicated there is less overall segregation in the Bay Area than in other parts of the country, but there are concentrated pockets of segregated housing throughout the region.

A 1965 open occupancy survey of Marin County showed more than half of it was resistant to integration. Of 118 apartments available, 52 per cent of their owners said they rejected Negroes and 16 per cent were evasive.

It was found that the degree of resistance to open occupancy varied from city to city. Mill Valley and Corte Madera were the only areas of the county in which there was no significant evidence of discrimination, though this was based on only seven cases in the two areas, the report said.

The most significant rejection was in San Rafael, where 59 per cent of the apartment owners said they refused to take Negroes and 14 per cent were evasive, according to the report.

Housing is difficult to obtain, the study said, for the 15 per cent of Bay Area households classified as needy on the basis of family size and income.

If low-cost housing were available solely to low-income persons, the report said, there would be enough dwelling units to meet needs. The report said, however, that many families who could afford to pay more are occupying low-cost housing.

Large families, minority families and the elderly have particular difficulty in finding adequate housing.

The report identified five central issues to be considered in acting to solve the Bay Area's housing needs.

First, should the emphasis be on public or private activity? (Currently, public housing represents less than 1 per cent of the area's total dwelling units.)

What level of government should be involved in developing housing policy? How should regional housing concerns be handled? Which should be emphasized, research or action programs? And, how can long range and short range goals be integrated?

How To (Puff, Gag) Stop Smoking

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Want to quit smoking? Have somebody blow stale smoke in your face. A lot of it. Often.

That's the basis of an anti-cigarette program credited with helping up to 90 per cent of the subjects in experimental classes stop smoking permanently.

Dr. Irwin Lublin, clinical psychologist at California State College at Los Angeles, uses a hair dryer to blow smoke from smoldering cigarettes into the faces of volunteers, all heavy smokers, drawn mostly from the 26,000-student campus.

He insists they puff on their own cigarettes while the treatment is going on. Some choke, some gag during the 30-minute sessions, but if they stick it out for five successive days the odds are high that they will kick the habit forever.

"We call it aversive conditioning," says Lublin. "After just one or two treatments, the subject begins to associate smoking —which he formerly enjoyed— with the unpleasant experience of smelling hot, stale smoke. Soon he beings to 'smell' hot, stale smoke every time he even thinks about lighting a cigarette, so he doesn't light one.

"The only failures we've had are people who don't really want to quit smoking, or whose psychological need to smoke is greater than their need to quit."

Lublin believes his method is better than those which rely on mild electrical shocks or on scaring the smoker by stressing the illnesses which may result from smoking.

"The mind doesn't associate electrical shocks with smoking as readily as it associates a bad smell with smoking," he said. "And the scare technique doesn't work too well because the mind may forget unpleasant statistics, but the body retains a physical aversion to stale smoke for a long time, long after the habit is broken."

For proof, Lublin points to his results.

"There are other methods which claim a high degree of success," he said, "but they make no attempt to check on the subjects later. If the subject has quit smoking at the end of five days, or two weeks, or whatever, the experimenter claims success.

"We make periodic checks for as long as the subject will cooperate. Some of the more than 200 we have worked with are still abstinent after two and a half years."

Lublin said test conductors with an authoritative manner have better results than others. "The better ones are successful in up to 90 per cent of the cases," he said.

The subjects sit in a small booth, puffing away while a hair dryer outside blows smoke from smoldering cigarettes through a hole into the booth.

Lublin said such booths would be difficult to rig on a large scale but suggested that institutions sell cigarettes designed to have an offensive odor. "If the subject smokes enough of them," he said, "his own brand will become offensive too. I am hoping to turn this idea over to the American Cancer Society or the U.S. Public Health Service for use in antismoking clinics across the country."

Lublin reported on his studies at a recent technical meeting and elaborated in an interview.

Nixon Plans To Fight For Court Balance

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Richard M. Nixon says he will press his fight "to restore the proper balance" to the Supreme Court despite the Senate's 55-45 rejection of his nomination of Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr.

But the President will wait until after Congress opens its new session in January to submit another nomination. Any nomination sent to the Senate this year would automatically lapse when the current session ends next month, unless confirmed before adjournment.

Nixon did not say if he would select another nominee with Haynsworth's conservative southern background, but he did say he would again apply criteria "consistent with my commitments to the American people before my election as President a year ago."

Expressing deep regret that the Senate had failed to confirm Haynsworth, the President said

Pentagon Trims January Draft Quota, Basic Training Structure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird has slashed the January draft call to 12,500 men—about one-third of the original quota—and pledged immediate action to install the new random lottery system.

In announcing this today, Laird said also the Army plans to cut back its basic-training structure by shutting down three bases and disbanding 100 training companies.

The Pentagon chief credited "the progress of Vietnamization"—that is, the progressive withdrawal of U. S. troops from the war and their replacement by South Vietnamese forces—with clearing the way for substantial reduction in draft calls and elimination of inequities and uncertainties.

The drastic draft-call reduction from the projected January quota of 35,000 men is the second such action by the Nixon administration.

Earlier, President Richard M. Nixon canceled November and December draft calls totalling 50,000 men and stretched out October's 29,000-man quota over the last three months of this year. Thus the November-December-January planned class have been reduced by 72,500 men.

Laird's statement came three days after the Senate completed congressional action on a bill permitting Nixon to put into effect the new random draft lottery system, replacing the present requirement to draft the oldest first.

After a transitional year, only 19-year-olds will be vulnerable for induction. During the first year all qualified men between 19 and 26 will be subject to the draft lottery.

Laird said Nixon soon will sign the draft bill "which will eliminate major inequities and uncertainties in the draft."

He said he will "take immediate action to implement the new legislation so that the men to be drafted in January 1970 will be brought into service under the new random-selection procedure."

The Pentagon has announced plans to reduce over-all armed force strength by 220,000 men by next June 30.

Of this number, the Army will lose 74,000 men. Draftees are assigned chiefly to the Army although 2,500 of the January quota will go to the Marine Corps.

As a result of this drop in Army strength, the Army will reduce its basic combat training companies from 560 to 460 before the end of February. Laird indicated that 30 advanced training companies may be eliminated next spring.

Laird did not identify the three basic combat training centers which will be shut down, but it is understood that Fort Gordon, Ga., and Fort Bliss, Tex., are included.

The Army increased its training centers to a total of 16 starting in mid-1965 in connection with the buildup of the armed forces for the Vietnam war.

24 Involved In Massacre Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army says 24 U.S. soldiers and former servicemen, in addition to an officer and staff sergeant already charged, are being investigated in the alleged murder of approximately 100 Vietnamese civilians in 1968.

But the South Vietnamese Defense Ministry in Saigon said today there was no massacre, that U.S. artillery and air strikers had killed "about 20 civilians" in a battle which claimed 125 Viet Cong.

Referring to some accounts being carried in the U.S. and foreign press, the South Vietnamese agency said: "Reports from newspapers and foreign news agencies recently that said 527 civilians were killed were completely inaccurate."

Pentagon spokesmen here had no comment on the Saigon announcement and indications

Apollo 12 Is Racing Faster Toward Earth

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Apollo 12 moon explorers streaked homeward today as earth's gravity pulled their Yankee Clipper spaceship faster and faster toward Monday's splashdown.

Charles (Pete) Conrad Jr., Richard F. Gordon Jr. and Alan L. Bean, weary from their successful lunar excurions, were allowed to sleep as long as they liked.

They went to sleep shortly after firing a powerful rocket burst behind the moon yesterday to break the lunar gravitational embrace and plunge earthward.

Mission Control let the Apollo 12 crew sleep for almost 12 hours, the longest rest period so far of the trip. Shortly after 7 a.m. there were signs of activity in the capsule and Mission Control beamed them a taped recording of "wake up music."

Conrad replied by turning on his own recorded music for what the ground communicator called "a little bit of a battle of bands."

About half an hour later the astronauts fired a two-second rocket burst to change the spacecraft's course slightly. The end effect of the burn was to make the scheduled splashdown one minute later than originally scheduled.

Then the ground read some sports and other news to the crew, along with notes about the spacemen's families' activities.

"Dick, Barbara will attend Mass this morning. Al, Sue will attend a luncheon today and visit Mission Control this afternoon. Pete, Jane is scheduled to go to the yacht club for the luncheon. And Sunday after church they plan to go on a picnic."

While they slept, the Yankee Clipper came under the dominance of earth's gravity. The spacecraft picked up speed and was to be 200,000 miles from earth by mid-morning today, moving at more than 2,000 miles an hour.

Apollo 12 will continue to gain speed until Monday afternoon when it sears into the earth's at-

Auto Crash Claims Life Of Marinite

Funeral for Susan J. Rushton, 20, of Novato, killed in a head-on crash in Richmond Thursday night, will be held at 3 p.m. tomorrow at Keaton's Chapel of Marin in Novato.

Miss Rushton, whose home is at 1542 Buchanan Street, was en route from a part-time job at Greenbrae Convalescent Hospital to her apartment in Berkeley when the accident occurred.

She maintained the apartment while attending the University of California at Berkeley, where she was an Asian history major.

Driver of the other car, Irvin Shiosee, 35, of Richmond, remained in Richmond City Jail today on suspicion of felony manslaughter. Police said that Shiosee, who works for a paint company, will probably appear in Municipal Court Monday for arraignment. No bail has been set.

Miss Rushton was eastbound on Hoffman Boulevard near 23rd Street at 11:44 p.m. when the crash occurred. Police said Shiosee's westbound car crossed the center line.

A native of San Francisco, Miss Rushton had lived in Novato for six years and was a graduate of Novato High School and College of Marin.

She leaves her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Rushton, and two sisters, Kathleen of Novato and Nancy A. Rushton of Kentfield.

Burial will be private.

FORD GRANT AID

Nature Preserves By U.C. Regents

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The University of California Board of regents has announced a natural land and water reserves system which will preserve diverse samples of California land in the wild state.

The program, half financed from the regents' funds and half by a Ford Foundation grant, is designed to protect natural land and water areas for study and conservation in the face of rapid population growth.

The system is the first of its kind in the nation and was called "an educational innovation, born of necessity" by Dr. Mildred E. Mathias of UCLA, chairman of the supervising committee.

The system was announced yesterday in connection with acquisition of the 12th piece of land — a 200-acre marsh purchased for $202,150 from the Irvine Co. Most of the other parcels of property were donated.

BIRD RESERVE

Other components of the system are:

Ano Nuevo Island, eight acres a half mile off the coast of San Mateo County and a haven for five kinds of seals and sea lions.

Box Springs, 160 acres of rocky terrain east of the Riverside campus harboring foxes, bobcats, deer, lizards and snakes.

Boyd Deep Canyon, 3,413 acres of pine and juniper in Riverside County where waters sustain desert bighorn sheep, coyotes and many birds, including the golden eagle.

Dawson Los Monos, 82 acres near Carlsbad in San Diego County, which is mostly canyon and supports bobcats, raccoons, badgers, possums and weasels.

Camp Elliott Chaparral, 106 acres of natural chaparral vegetation on a mesa east of La Jolla.

Hastings Natural History Reservation, 1,600 acres in the Santa Lucia Mountains of the Carmel Valley in Monterey County, where 100 species of birds have been counted.

James San Jacinto Mountain, 30 acres near Lake Fulmor in Riverside County, which includes the site of a large Indian community.

MISSION BAY

Kendall-Frost Mission Bay Marsh, 20 acres on the northeast corner of San Diego County's Mission Bay, which harbors the great blue heron, two species of egrets and several species of ducks.

Pygmy Forest, 20 acres of pygmy pine on fossil dune terraces near Fort Bragg in Mendocino County.

Sawyer-Trinity Alps, 125 acres of conifer forest near Cecilville in Siskiyou County.

Education As Capital — Reagan

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Gov. Ronald Reagan thinks students at the University of California should be required to pay back the cost of their education after they have been graduated and are working.

"Higher education should be looked upon as a capital investment," Reagan told the Board of Regents yesterday during a discussion on charging students tuition.

"Why can't we look at this not as an immediate fee but as a capital improvement, and like all capital improvements, spread the payment of it over the lifetime of the improvement.

'ALL COSTS'

"I'm talking about not only tuition, but all costs —pay them back after earnings start."

A majority of the regents agreed with the governor and asked UC President Charles J. Hitch to come back in January with details for a proposed learn-now, pay-later tuition plan.

However, Regent William Roth of San Francisco said university graduates already pay back the cost of their education through the taxes they pay on their higher incomes.

HIGH SCHOOLS

"This would be a fundamental change which could be extended down through high school age and into other areas. We regents must not easily change our moral and economic colors. Our tuition-free policy is 100 years old," Roth argued.

Reagan said he thought students should "pay back not the total cost of education, but only that percentage that represents the improvement in their lifetime earnings which they have personally gained."

"Students are the only reason we have a university," the governor added. "It is not a sanctuary for someone who wants to pursue knowledge just for knowledge's sake."

Reagan mentioned no specific figures and he did not say where the money would come from if students were to begin borrowing funds for books, room and board as well as tuition as he suggested.

The regents also voted to discontinue summer school at Berkeley and UCLA as an economy move.

Merz Brothers Gets Tiburon Street Nod

Merz Brothers of Greenbrae, was low bidder, at $3,395 to repair storm damage on Tiburon Boulevard in Tiburon, the state Division of Highways announced yesterday.

Seven bids were made to remove slide material and restore a slope two-tenths of a mile east of Cecelia Way.

The typewriter has been termed the "only left-handed machine in general use." The most frequently used keys are on the left.

Disposal Unit Shrinks Tons Of Garbage

STANFORD (UPI)—A waste disposal unit that can handle 500 tons of garbage a day by reducing it to a small heap of sterile slag has been described to the Assembly Committee on Natural Resources and Conservation.

Gianni Siracusa told the committee the disposal unit can take everything except tin cans in its 2,900-degree furnace and reduce the waste to almost nothing —one per cent by volume and eight per cent by weight.

Siracusa heads the Sira Corp. of Los Gatos which developed the disposal unit with the help of the Food Machinery Corp. of San Jose.

The committee, which listened for two days to testimony on the best methods of dealing with California's growing trash problem, took yesterday afternoon off to visit the Los Gatos plant.

"You hear a lot about sanitary land fill, but it creates methane gas from rotting material, very explosive," Siracusa told the assemblymen. "And if you build a park on top of it and then water the lawn, you contaminate the water table underneath."

"This material," he said, holding up a piece of slag, "is absolutely sterile. It will contaminate nothing."

"You can grind it up and mix it with asphalt or cement for paving, or you can use the ground-up material itself for fill. You can take it out and dump it in the ocean and it will not poison anything."

Siracusa said the automatic disposal could be operated by four men and would handle waste including mature, industrial and toxic waste, cannery residue and even sewage sludge.

Two Suits Challenge Two-Thirds Majority

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The state Supreme Court today had before it a pair of suits by San Franciscans challenging the two-thirds majority requirement for passing bond issues.

One was filed yesterday by San Francisco lawyer Stephen Adams and the other by Peter J. Donnici, a member of Mayor Joseph Alioto's law firm.

Both demanded that the city certify as passed Propositions A and B, which received a hefty majority in the recent election but not the required two-thirds. Proposition A was for park improvements and Proposition B was for school improvements in ghetto areas.

The suit by Alioto's firm was filed on behalf of a group of parents in the Hunters Point-Bay view areas.

It argued that all who voted for the bond issues suffered "the debasement and the dilution of their voting rights . . ."

"In the San Francisco election here at issue, each 'no' vote neutralized two 'yes' votes. Thus those citizens who disapproved of the bond proposals had votes which were double the weight of those voters, such as our petitioners, who favored the proposals."

Adams, who filed a suit naming himself as the petitioner, made similar arguments.

A similar challenge to the two-thirds requirement has been upheld by a Sutter County superior court judge and is now on appeal to the higher courts.

Arraignment In Bad Check Case

David Lyle Boese, 21, of 388 Riviera Circle, Larkspur, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on a charge of giving a bad check Sept. 12 to the Ross Automotive Service.

Boese is scheduled to plea to the charge Dec. 2.

The $354 check was allegedly written on an account that had been closed for two months.

Narcotics Case Arraignment Held

Michael Edwin Reilly, 25, of 437 Live Oak Drive, Mill Valley, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on charges of possessing marijuana and LSD when arrested by narcotics agents at his home Thursday.

A preliminary hearing was set for Jan. 8.

Agents said they obtained a search warrant for Reilly's house after noticing that he had received a great many visits from people believed to be narcotics dealers.

They said they found 89 LSD tablets and small amounts of marijuana and hashish in the house. Also found in the search were several guns, including a .22 pistol for which the agents said Reilly did not have a bill of sale.

Reilly is free on $3,125 bail.

Hoagh Is 70

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Hoagy Carmichael, whose gift for melody made him a millionaire, is 70 years old today — but he's still composing and says, "I don't feel any different from 12 or 15 years ago."

Tanned and dapper in a bright sport coat, Carmichael recalled over a late poolside breakfast yesterday that it has been 38 years since he wrote "Stardust."

There's a long list of other songs he composed: "Old Buttermilk Sky," "Skylark," "Lazy Bones," "Lazy River," "Rockin Chair," "I Get Along Without You Very Well," "Little Old Lady," and "Georgia on My Mind."

In 1951, he won an Oscar for "In the Cool, Cool, Cool of the Evening," from the movie "Here Comes the Groom."

Carmichael divides his time among his Hollywood penthouse, overlooking the Sunset Strip: a $145,000 showplace home at Palm Springs, which fronts on the Thunderbird Country Club golf course; and periodic visits to Las Vegas Strip hotels.

Libya Talks Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says it is willing to begin by the middle of next month discussions with Libya's new revolutionary government on U.S. withdrawal from Wheelus Air Force Base.

Spokesman Carl Bartch said yesterday it is possible the United States will withdraw from Wheelus by 1971, the year U.S. departure was to have been completed. Libya has asked for an early withdrawal, although no deadline has been set.

The base has been used in connection with NATO operations.

Envoy In Moscow

HELSINKI (AP) — Lewellyn Thompson, a leading expert on Russia and former U.S. ambassador to Moscow, has arrived to take part in the strategic arms limitation talks.

Asked on his arrival yesterday about the prospects for the Soviet-U.S. talks, Lewellyn would say only: "I am an optimist."

11 Children Die

SAIGON (AP) — A three-story orphanage on the western edge of Saigon collapsed early today, killing at least 11 children and two teachers. Three other children were missing and believed dead.

American and Vietnamese rescue workers chopped through rubble and broken concrete to search for the missing children.

Officials said the brick and concrete structure that was home to 40 Vietnamese orphans "just collapsed." There was no evidence of an explosion.

Men of a U.S. Army signal battalion which "adopted" the orphanage four years ago were among the workers struggling to break through the debris.

Tricia's View

NEW YORK (AP) — President Richard M. Nixon's 23-year-old daughter, Tricia, says her generation is "is going out and making positive contributions."

As for "those few who are going out and doing negative things," Miss Nixon said on "The Merv Griffin Show" last night, "well, they're very few."

She described her contemporaries as a "very vocal and concerned generation . . . and for the most part I'm very proud of my generation."

Quint Dies

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — The smallest of the quintuplets born to Mrs. Isabel Hernandez Neilz in Tarrasa yesterday remained in critical condition today with breathing difficulties. The second smallest, who had been in serious condition yesterday was reported slightly improved. The other three were in satisfactory condition.

Prankster Keeps Hub Fire Department Busy

A prankster stayed up half the night last night plaguing San Anselmo firemen with false alarms to the same corner — Oak Knoll Avenue and Medway Road.

The street alarm was pulled at 11:10 p.m., 11:35 p.m. and 12:04 a.m. Each time, firemen found no one at the corner, and no fire.

Nixon's Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although President Richard M. Nixon's Sept. 26 formal press conference was his only such appearance since early summer he will continue to use that forum, the White House says.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said yesterday he didn't think there had been a slowdown in news conferences or in presidential communications with the poeple. He called the President's seven news conferences to date "worthwhile and useful" but gave no indication when the next full scale news conference might take place.

Krupa On Drugs

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Gene Krupa, the consummate drummer of the jazz era, played his drums in a courtroom Friday to warn a new generation about an old problem — drug abuse.

Krupa, 60, told some 200 persons in a County Court Building he knew at least 100 musicians whose careers had been ruined by the use of drugs. With his drums, he illustrated the effect he said marijuana had on his timing.

"I suppose like every other kid I thought it would better my playing, but that was an hallucination," Krupa said.

He said when he listened to recordings of his playing while under the influence of the drug, he "found it was pretty bad."

Tears In Speech By Mrs. Gandhi

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, in tears, offficially took charge of her faction of the broken Congress party today. In an emotion-choked voice, she said no one could remove her from the chosen path of the country.

At the first meeting of the All India Congress committee since the breakup of her ruling party, Mrs. Gandhi said she would not be deterred from her Socialist policies by her expulsion from the organization by old guard leaders on Nov. 12.

Mrs. Gandhi presided over the meeting of 440 of the party's 705 elected delegates in the absence of party President Siddavanalli Nijalingappa, leader of the old guard, who refused to attend.

Sausalito Physician Retires After 50 Years

By LARRY D. HATFIELD

The office was almost bare of furniture and equipment, most of the latter already in the new pediatrician's clinic in Marin City or on its way to Biafra.

There were no squirming children in the waiting room, a sight that had characterized the little room — and ones like it — for nearly half a century.

The phone was silent and that seemed strange.

Dr. Charna G. Perry, sitting at her desk with a closed appointment book on it, smiled and said, "I celebrated my 75th birthday (on Nov. 14) and I thought that was a good time to quit."

With another smile, the diminuitive Ukrainian, who practicied medicine in Sausalito for almost 50 years, said, "I will never be missed. There are lots of young doctors."

Dr. Perry, as that statement attests, is not sorry to be leaving the profession that brought her to the United States in 1915. "It is time for me to quit," she says, adding that her profession has been good to her.

Dr. Perry, who says she is "going to rest a lot" now, was the founder of the first well baby clinic in Marin County and also founded the second birth control clinic on the West Coast — in 1931.

Born in the Ukraine, Dr. Perry moved with her family to Shanghai in 1906 and she was destined to go to the University of Cambridge to become a doctor. She never got there and ended up in Sausalito instead.

"I was to go to the University of Cambridge — Shanghai was a British colony, you know — but I didn't know how to get there," she said. The year was 1915 and "I would have had to cross territory that was very actively engaged in war."

So, on the advice of friends who said that because it was founded by Cambridge, Harvard ought not to be too bad, she headed for Boston. "But when I arrived there, I found Harvard was not co-educational," she reminisced. "I liked Boston though so I went to Tufts."

A week after she was graduated, she married her husband, who died in 1946, and they came to San Francisco where she was an intern, then resident, at Children's Hospital.

DR. CHARNA G. PERRY
'Time to quit'

At that time, shortly after World War I, medical men were expressing concern about malnutrition among American youths. Thirty per cent of the men called for service in the war were rejected because of malnutrition.

There was a need for establishing well baby clinics, they said. "They said they wanted someone young and enthusiastic," Dr. Perry recalled, "so they asked Dr. Adelaide Brown of the state board of health to pick someone. She chose me because I trained in the East. There were more slums in the East so I would have more experience."

It was the same Dr. Brown who again called on Dr. Perry in the 1930s to establish Marin's first birth control clinic. The first such clinic was opened in San Francisco and the Sausalito clinic was close behind.

The first baby clinic was opened in January of 1921 and Dr. Perry was the resident physician at seven clinics from Sausalito to Novato for the next 25 years.

"The doctors from up north used to say they would hug the hillside when they saw me coming because they knew I was in a hurry."

She was still at it up to a month before she retired, offering her services to the new Marin City pediatrician's clinic opened last month.

When Dr. Perry first went to the "peaceful, quiet village" of Sausalito, she read the first page of the medical ethics book which said to visit established physicians in town. There were four and they were all men.

Was that a problem? Not at all, she said. "I think they treated me nicer because I was a woman. They were most cordial and cooperative."

It was one of those doctors who referred her first patient to her, a pregnant woman.

Although illnesses and injuries haven't changed, patients have, she said. Patients today are more aware, a contrast to one woman patient of years ago who wanted to have her baby at home. The doctor agreed and made the then long trip to Ross General Hospital to sterilize linens and towels.

The day after she returned them to the woman to be used when the blessed event came, the patient called to complain that the sterilization had yellowed all her sheets. "So it was back over to Ross to resterilize them," Dr. Perry chuckled. "She told me she had to open them up to see if all her sheets came back."

She almost left Sausalito once when she went to Shanghai in 1931 and was offered the pediatric chief's job at Children's Hospital there. "Things were becoming hectic in Shanghai," she said of the coming of the Japanese, "and I got a wire from my husband and children to come home on the next boat."

She did, learning as she went that the woman head of the hospital, an American, had been encamped by the Japanese. "When I re-entered my house, I made myself a promise never to leave it again," she said.

She's keeping the promise. Although she intends to travel some now, "I'll stay close to Marin County."

Woman, 30, Is Stabbed In Mill Valley

A 30-year-old Mill Valley woman was stabbed last night by a darkly clothed youth outside the Palate Restaurant in Mill Valley.

Police said Judy Steevves of 14 Creek Lane suffered multiple stab wounds in the chest. She was given resuscitation by the Mill Valley Fire Department and taken to Marin General Hospital where she was reported in fair condition today in the intensive care unit.

Witnesses said the woman was walking west on Throckmorton Avenue near the restaurant about 10 p.m. when she was approached by a Nergo, about 17 years of age, between five feet, eight inches and 5 feet, 10 inches tall, and weighing 150 pounds. The youth had a short haircut, was clean shaven, wore dark clothing, and appeared to make friendly gestures toward Miss Steevves, according to witnesses.

Then, police said, the woman screamed and the youth fled The woman staggered a few steps to the restaurant door and collapsed just inside, according to officers.

One witness chased the assailant but gave up when the man threatened him with what appeared to be a long, switchblade knife.

Black Leaders Deny 'Terrorism' At State

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A group of leaders from the black community has denied charges of a "reign of terror" in San Francisco State College's Black Studies Department.

The denial made yesterday, came just three days after a group of black Baptist ministers said they supported President S. I. Hayakawa's charge.

The deniers, led by the Rev. Cecil Williams of Glide Memorial Methodist Church, asked for a "meaningful, constructive meeting" with Hayakawa, of Mill Valley. The five leaders also said black Baptist ministers who Monday supported the charge of intimidation in the department, "did not understand the situation fully."

Willams, who said the faculty of the black studies program "is doing a fantastic job," also called for the college to rehire ousted sociologist Nathan Hare as department chairman.

Asked how his group would get Hare reinstated, Williams said, "We will follow the directions of the Black Students Union."

After the news conference by the black congregation, Hayakawa issued a statement describing Hare as a man who "refused to do his job when he had a job here to do and who boastfully wanted to use the department for the promotion of revolution."

The president charged the BSU with destroying the "excellent black studies department we have."

"When will these people learn that I don't have a reverse gear," Hayakawa said in regard to rehiring Hare. Hare was fired during last year's student strike at the school for allegedly taking part in disruptive activities.

A BABY EATS FATHER'S WAY OUT OF COURT

HONOLULU (UPI) — A man pleaded guilty in traffic court yesterday on a charge of not having a mandatory sticker on his car windshield.

"My baby ate it," he told magistrate James Leavey.

"Now I've heard it all," Leavey said. "How on earth did the baby get the sticker off the windshield?"

"Well, it was scotch-taped on," the man replied.

"And did the baby eat the tape, too?" the judge asked.

"Yes, your honor," the man said.

"Anybody who can come up with a story like that deserves credit," Leavey said. "Case dismissed."

Innocent Plea To Drug Counts

Clarence Dale Taylor, 26, of Fairfax, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to charges of driving under the influence of narcotics, possessing heroin and driving a car as a known addict.

A preliminary hearing was set for Dec. 9.

Taylor was arrested Nov. 7 when narcotics agents followed him from the San Rafael apartment of a woman who has been charged with heroin sales.

Water Rate Hike Due In January

Water rates for the Inverness Sea Haven and Drakes Beach areas will go up 21 per cent in January by order yesterday of the state Public Utilities Commission.

The increase will mean that the average user, who consumes 600 cubic feet of water per month, will pay $7.08 per month, compared with the old rate of $5.85 per month.

However, the new rate will not be as high as a temporary increase granted last Sept. 25. That raise was 42 per cent, and the average consumer has been paying $8.30 per month since Sept. 25.

State PUC Examiner Carol T. Coffey, who announced the rate increase, ordered the Inverness Water Co. to submit a plan for refunding the extra revenues collected under the interim increase.

The permanent increase is far below the Inverness Water Co.'s request for an 87 per cent raise in rates, which would have meant a bill of $10.94 per month for the average user of 600 cubic feet.

Hearings on the rate increase were held in Inverness and in San Francisco during October and November last year.

Lumber Firm Loss Cited By Attorney

Sausalito attorney Hugh G. Lawrence, who is defending an Oregon lumber firm's right to fell timber on Bolinas Ridge, declared today that the company has suffered $350,000 to $400,000 in damages because of the county's action against the operations.

Lawrence said he plans to call a representative of the lumber firm, Mathews, Humbert and Walker of Coos Bay, to testify to the damages sometime next week. Trial resumes Monday morning in Alameda County Superior Court before Judge Robert H. Kroninger.

Lawrence said the company had contracts to deliver lumber to Japanese ships in Richmond, but the logs could not be delivered, and the ships were diverted.

Lawrence plans to call a hydrologist and two professors from the University of California School of Forestry to testify that the logging on the 1,400-acre Ethel Righetti Ranch on Bolinas Ridge is not a nuisance.

The county, represented by County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney and Deputy Joseph A. Forest, wound up its case on Thursday. Kroninger has granted a temporary injunction against the logging which the county wants made permanent.

Lawrence said his case will take all of next week. At his request, Judge Kroninger tentatively set a field trip Friday to the logging area.

Yesterday, Lawrence challenged sedimentation figures used by the county in estimating the amount of mud runoff from the Righetti Ranch into Pine Gulch Creek.

Sausalito Man Hurt In Collision

A 25-year-old Sausalito man was reported in good condition in Marin General Hospital today after surgery for a fractured spinal disc and broken leg sustained in a car-motorcycle collision Thursday.

Charles Leinberg, 25, of 403B Pine Street, was injured about 12:30 p.m. when his westbound motorcycle crossed into the eastbound lane on Shoreline Highway in Tamalpais Valley and hit a vehicle driven by Robaline M. Meacham of 331 Jean Street, Mill Valley, the California Highway Patrol said.

A passenger on the motorcycle, Edward Cashman, 23, also of 403B Pine Street, was treated for a broken ankle and leg cuts.

Leinberg told the California Highway Patrol he went into the opposite lane to dodge a vehicle which crossed the center line into his lane.

mosphere at 36,000 miles an hour and parachutes to a landing in the Pacific Ocean near American Samoa.

The astronauts spent their last day in lunar orbit photographically surveying three craters which future Apollo crews may use as landing sites.

One of the craters, Fra Mauro, is a few hundred miles from the Ocean of Storms, where Apollo 12 landed, and is expected to be the destination of Apollo 13 next March. Also photographed were Descartes and Lalande, both of particular interest to scientists because they may be composed of some of the oldest material on the moon.

On their 45th orbit of the moon, the astronauts fired their powerful rocket engine. The rocket firing occurred behind the moon and as the spacecraft reappeared it was fleeting homeward at more than 5,000 miles an hour.

Gravitational pull of the moon slowed it until about 10 p.m., EST, when the earth's gravity took hold and Apollo 12 started down hill toward home.

The astronauts are returning with what they went to the moon to get-a spacecraft packed with precious moon rocks, film magazines full of lunar navigation photography, and proof that the Apollo lunar lander can be touched down on the moon almost precisely where it's aimed from earth.

Conrad said he landed so near the planned place that "I gave myself quite a thrill."

"I think you will appreciate it when you see the pictures and you see how close we landed to the crater," he said.

Bean said that walking in the reduced gravity of the moon's surface was a funny thing. "Your legs never seem to get tired," he said. "You assume some kind of normal pace and you're able to go for long distances without your legs getting tired."

"I found I couldn't walk," said Conrad. "Wherever we went we loped, and it just didn't seem natural not to lope."

Conrad said he fell down once during the seven-and-a-half hours he and Bean walked the moon's surface. "I didn't have any problems getting up," he said.

"Finally, to expedite things, we would just fall over on our face, picking up rocks, and give ourselves a one-hand pushup, or just get down on our knees and get whatever it was we needed."

As the crew settled down for the night, ground controllers said, "Sleep in as long as you want .... We're not going to awaken you in the morning."

During their week in space, the Apollo 12 crew had three work days lasting more than 20 hours. They got only four to five hours of sleep Thursday night.

"the Supreme Court needs men of his legal philosophy to restore the proper balance to that great institution."

The vote yesterday, which climaxed a bitter three-month struggle over judicial ethics and philosophy, was Nixon's most severe congressional defeat since he took office.

From his home in Greenville, S.C., Haynsworth said he would have to consider "whether my usefulness has been so impaired" that he would resign as chief judge of the U.S. 4th Court of Appeals. Haynsworth said he would not decide "in the emotion of the moment."

Nixon telephoned Haynsworth after the vote and told him he hoped he would stay on as chief judge of the appellate court.

Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., who directed the floor fight for the nomination, told reporters that in his judgment the 57-year-old jurist would have been confirmed if it had not been for labor opposition.

But Hruska said he thinks "the people realize it was a defeat for balance on the Supreme Court." The senator said it will be difficult to mount a successful campaign against another nominee with a conservative background.

were it caught them by surprise.

Only hours earlier the Army had issued a statement to members of Congress where there is a growing demand for an investigation of the raid.

In reference to the March 1968 raid near a hamlet known as My Lai, the Army said: "During the operation a small group of American soldiers reportedly shot many (possibly 100) Vietnamese civilians."

The Army said that Lt. William L. Calley, 26, now stationed at Ft. Benning, Ga., was charged in the incident and a decision woud be made early next week whether he will face court martial. Calley was leader of a unit involved in the operation.

A staff sergeant, David Mitchell, 29, of St. Francisville, La., has been charged with assault to commit murder.

Robert E. Jordan III, the Army's general counsel, said that another nine men still in the service and 15 others who have been discharged since the raid are under investigation.

He said the former soldiers could face court martial under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Investigators so far have questioned about 75 persons, including Vietnamese who might have first-hand knowledge about the case, Jordan said.

He denied the Army is covering up the case, saying it is not in a legal position to give details or talk about aspects of the case because it could prejudice the rights of the men who may go to trial.

"Whether a crime was committed and who did it will be the two big issues if there is a trial," Jordan said.

Jordan agreed the Army might be in a better position from a public relations standpoint if it could come out in the open.

The statement Friday came after Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y., and Rep. William L. Minshall, R-Ohio, urged separate congressional investigations into the incident.

Goodell said he will press for an investigation despite the Army's revelations, which he called "shocking."

Minshall also said he would push for his probe. "I wouldn't have asked for an investigation if I didn't think there was going to be one," he said.

The horse had been under private care in Petaluma since the accident. Utah was injured when he fell down a 50-foot embankment and became wedged under a fallen tree. Marin County Humane Society officials and firemen worked for three hours to free the stuck animal.

Insurance And Another Auto

Nowadays families often have two or more cars and regular use of other "company" cars.

If you do, make sure your accident coverage covers all the family activities.

In a recent case, Charles had two cars. He, his wife, and their two teen-agers used them. Charles' insurance policy covered them on any other car he might drive from time to time. But the policy did not cover a car which he did not own, but drove regularly.

As a salesman, Charles drove a company car. A good opportunity came up for Charles and Sam, another salesman. Sam leased a car which the two used on business, but Charles also used it for his personal needs after working hours.

While driving the leased car on a weekend pleasure trip, Charles hit another car. The other driver sued him. Charles lacked insurance on the leased car but he asked his insurance company to defend him in court. When it refused, Charles sued his company demanding that it defend him and pay any judgment he might have to pay.

Charles lost. The court ruled that he was regularly using the other car for business as well as social purposes, not temporarily.

When you buy or transfer a car, by all means see that you are insured. Take Lucy, for instance, who had regular car insurance. Her insurance covered any driver using her car with her permission. But Lucy transferred the car to her brother.

Although she did not notify the Department of Motor Vehicles, her brother Jack now owned it for insurance purposes and could drive it without her permission.

When Jack had an accident, Lucy's policy no longer covered his driving.

Most policies cover the named insured and any person driving with his permission, but that person cannot allow a third person to drive without the owner's permission. Inform your insurance company as soon as a learner's permit or a driver's license is issued to a minor in your family.

Notify the Department of Motor Vehicles immediately when you transfer a car. The Department has forms for this purpose.

By LARRY D. HATFIELD

Threatened with a legal suit by a citizens group on one hand and faced with a flexing of industry muscle on the other, the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District yesterday marked time on the question of whether to change its policy of suppressing information identifying major air polluters.

The executive committee of the district board, in a meeting demanded by a San Jose-based group called Citizens Against Air Pollution, voted to meet with industry representatives to discuss the policy under which companies now may give the district information on a confidential basis.

Committee chairman Laurence D. Kelly of Alameda County said the executive committee will have recommendations for the full board by January.

The six-member committee wrangled for nearly two hours with attorney Robert Townsend and Peter B. Venuto, head of CAAP, who want the district to release the names and amount of pollutants of all bay area industrial polluters whether they are violating district standards or not.

Santa Clara directors Victor Calvo and William R. Jelavich indicated they thought the information policy should be changed somehow but other directors remained uncommitted. Kelly, who repeatedly questioned the advantages of naming companies not violating pollution standards, maintained that present policies are giving the public necessary information. He referred several times to the district's monthly release of lists of violations.

Townsend, however, refused to accept Kelly's argument or a defense of the present suppression of information by the district staff, insisting, "The issue is the right of industry to withhold information against that of the right of the public to know."

Release of more information on polluters was strongly opposed by D. J. Callighan, chief administrative officer of the district, and by the Bay Area League of Industrial Associations (BALIA.)

BALIA presented a seven-point policy statement in which it said, "We feel that disclosure of specific source data would result in an endless series of lawsuits filed by interested and concerned citizens who have insufficient background and knowledge to properly interpret the data.

"These litigation procedures and the resultant publicity would consume district staff time and the time of industrial technical personnel so that all would be diverted from their primary task of protecting air quality."

The statement then delivered an implied threat that if the policy is changed, industry would quit giving the district information on pollution sources. "If the disclosure policy of the district is changed to permit release of confidential data," the statement warned, "then future requests for data will require close scrutiny and examination by legal counsel. The excellent cooperative relationships which now exist in the area of information exchange would be seriously jeopardized by the necessity for legal opinion in each case."

Callaghan also said full disclosure would cost the district money and would spur industry to cut off information. In a two-and-a-half page memorandum, he said, "It is felt that the release of information developed through our enforcement efforts would seriously affect our future enforcement activities to the extent that industrial sources would no longer provide confidential information to us on a voluntary basis.

"To secure and evaluate this data by means of source tests and other methods available to us would require a substantial increase in our staff with a resulting large increase in operating expenses (but) without a corresponding increase in efficiency."

Townsend contended that the public could and would absorb, through taxes, the increased costs to the district. He also said consumer pressure on known pollutants would force those firms to spend more on cleaning the "poison" from the air and the public would also pay for that in the purchase price of finished products.

Townsend also charged that the district was a do-nothing agency and said the smog hanging over the city yesterday offered ample testimony to how effective air pollution controls had been.

All six board members defended the board's record, as did Callaghan, who said Venuto and his group insisted on making all debates "a one-way street."

The decision to meet with industry did not satisfy Venuto's group, but CAAP leaders indicated that a threatened legal test to open up the information policy would be delayed pending outcome of that meeting.

At the end of the meeting, Sarah Feldner of the State Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association told the directors that growing dissatisfaction about air pollution in the Bay Area was part of a "tide of consumerism" sweeping the country and said the board was moving slowly to solve the problem.

She asked the board to take the lead and call a regional conference among civic, conservation and other groups and industry to discuss air pollution control. Kelly said the committee would consider it.

Five-Car Pile-Up Injures Three

Three persons sustained minor injuries and southbound traffic on Highway 101 was tied up for about 30 minutes yesterday as a result of a five-car, rear-end collision on Puerto Suelo Hill.

Injured and treated by their own doctors were Robert B. Hamhill, 58, and his wife, Jane Hamhill, 47, of 1027 Bel Marin Keys, Novato, and Robyn L. Horvath, 18, of 14 Cermenho Court, San Rafael.

Doctor Cites Link Between Cancer Of Cervix And Early Intercourse

DEAR HELEN:

A writer to your column said cancer of the cervix is more prevalent among those who had early sexual intercourse. Is this really true? — QUESTIONER

DEAR QUESTIONER:

I quote from Graham B. Blaine Jr., Chief of Psychiatric Service, Harvard University Health Services, Cambridge, Mass., who states in a recent physician's journal, "An interesting clinical fact is that cancer of the cervix is three times more prevalent in individuals who have had intercourse before the age of 17 than in those who haven't. . . . Most psysicians feel that total sex for persons between the ages of 15 and 20 . . . is an inappropriate outlet for the sexual impulses . . ." — H.

DEAR HELEN:

"Engaged" thinks flower petals should be used at weddings if the couple objects to having rice thrown as they run from the church.

This is very dangerous. Flower petals on church steps can be very slippery. Who wants to end up with a broken arm or leg on your wedding day? — EXPERIENCED

DEAR EX:

You can slip on rice too — and also on those paper carpets which are sometimes used in church aisles and entrances for VIP effect at weddings. Perhaps all newlyweds should be cautioned to run carefully. — H

DEAR HELEN:

Seems awfully picky, not wanting rice thrown at you after the wedding. This tradition has definite symbolism. Rice stands for fertility and by showering it on a newly wedded couple, you wish them a very fruitful marriage. — RICE THROWER

DEAR R.T.:

You'll get static here from the "population-explosion" people. They figure very fruitful marriages should be outlawed. — H

DEAR HELEN:

If an all-white wedding cake is traditional as "Chocolate Lover" says, then many many brides for the past six years have let it slide by. I know, as I work for a large bakery chain.

Many of the brides-to-be have requested that the top tier (which they plan to keep for their first anniversary) be chocolate, and others ask that at least one of the larger tiers also be dark for their friends who prefer the rich chocolate flavor. As the cake is entirely covered with white frosting, what's inside should be left up to preference of the individual couples. — BAKER

DEAR HELEN:

My fiance must be the worst-mannered person on the road when he's driving. Otherwise, he's wonderful and I love him to pieces.

What is it that makes some people turn into bad-tempered mean-mouthed grouches whenever another driver makes an error (and sometimes even if he doesn't)? When I complain about his actions, he gets mad at me.

This must run in the family, as my boy friend's father is the same way. How can you cure people of being automotive ogres? — EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMB:

There's something about the driver's seat that turns otherwise nice guys into kings of the road. Good-natured kidding might help these superdefensive people, but not much. — H

Let Experts Pleat Fabrics

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

With pleated fabric used so much in expensive ready-to-wear, how can we who try to copy these beautiful things find the pleated fabrics?

MRS. H. R. S.

DEAR MRS. H.R.S.:

There are some types of fabric that can be purchased already pleated and others you will have to have pleated for you. Almost any kind of fabric can be permanently pleated professionally, but this type of service is usually only found in large cities.

You can find pleating companies listed in the phone book. If they are located too far away, write to them and find out whether you should hem the fabric first. This will depend on the fabric and the type of pleating you wish; how much you should allow in width; and the cost per yard. If you decide to go ahead with it, I know you will be pleased with the results. Unfortunately, the cost is based on the time it takes to set the machinery up; once this is done, it is a simple operation.

"With all the safari type clothes today which involve lots of pockets that are always top-stitched, I have devised a method of keeping my top-stitching nice and even.

"For pocket, pocket flaps, collars or what ever, I cut these parts out of a firm non-woven interfacing. Change the outer edges by cutting enough away so that it fits to the exact tip-stitching line on the pattern. This will act as sort of template. Pin it onto the finished section to be top-stitched and carefully stitch around the template and remove it. If you are making more than one garment with this popular pattern, your guide or template can be used over and over and all your stitching will be symmetrical."

DEAR EUNICE,

I have just finished making a skirt with several pleats that are formed in seams. I can't seem to get them to lie flat no matter how hard I press them. What would you suggest?

MR. J.M.H.

DEAR MRS. J.M.H.:

It is very difficult and almost impossible to make any pleat lie flat if it is formed in a seam unless you use another construction tip. Machine baste the lower 10 inches of the seam instead of stitching the entire seam with the regular length stitch. Have someone mark the correct hem length for you, after this is done remove the machine basting at the lower part of the skirt. Complete your hem in sections.

Press the hem and then pin the lower edges together, be sure the finished edges come out exactly even and machine stitch through your hem and continue stitching until you come to the point where you ended the original stitching.

It will be necessary to double stitch at the very end to avoid pulling out. You may wish to fold the seam allowance at an angle at the lower edge and lightly tack it to your hem. You'll be so pleased with the sharp appearance of your pleats from now on.

DEAR EUNICE,

I have only been sewing a short time but seem to have a recurring problem. In our town we have virtually no choice in any kind of fabric except synthetics and polyester knits that are folded. I simply can't get the crease out of some of these fabrics and would appreciate an answer.

MRS. J.A.

DEAR MRS. J.A.:

I will make this answer very brief since I have already answered your question recently. It is more difficult to remove the crease in some fabrics than in others; it is best to avoid using the original crease or fold of the fabric. The fabric should be refolded especially when cutting the front of the garment that is usually cut without a seam

Most fabrics today are wide enough to cut the front section without using the original fold. Open the fabric and form a new fold by measuring the width of your pattern and make your new fold the same width. Carefully measure your new fold at several places so that it is exactly even with the selvage to avoid cutting off grain.

Questions most frequently asked by home sewers are answered in the helpful booklet "Twenty Questions." For your copy send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Too Many Oranges Mean Lower Prices

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The outlook for California oranges is sweet for those who eat them, sour for those who grow them.

The problem: too many oranges.

Or, looking at it another way, not enough orange lovers.

Sunkist Growers, the big citrus cooperative, is trying to remedy matters by persuading growers that over-production will hurt them and by persuading consumers that oranges are a delicious bargain.

The crop of navels now coming to market is expected to hit 48,000 carloads, up 20 per cent from last year. This is expected to result in lower prices for fruit fanciers and lower profits for orchardists.

Even bigger harvests are predicted for the 1970s, due to an abundance of orchards whose trees aren't yet bearing. There has been heavy planting in Central California, more than making up for acreage lost in Southern California.

Some industry sources fear that if the world doesn't develop an acute orange hunger soon, there could be a repeat of the "orange depression" of the 1940s. Crops glutted the market. Low prices and rising taxes forced many growers out of business. Southern California acreage dropped from 350,000 to 250,000 in 10 years.

The Sunkist campaign has been most effective on valencias. The crop is expected to be 50,000 cartons next year, down from the 61,000 of this year, biggest since 1946. Prices on this year's crop may not be enough to meet costs. No similar cutback is likely for navels, which command higher prices.

While prices vary with the size of the crop, from $1.09 to $1.81 a carton for navels in recent years, demand is fairly stable. Even when there's a glut, Americans don't seem to eat more.

Consumption of fresh oranges, in fact, has declined from the peak of 50 pounds a year per capita during World War II to about 20 now.

Sunkist, with an advertising budget ranging between $1.5 and 4 million depending on the size and quality of a year's crop, is trying to tap new markets.

The firm is trying to get institutions—schools and hospitals—to buy more oranges. It's plugging hard overseas. Hong Kong, for instance, now consumes 1.5 million cartons a year. Japan is a rising market. Oranges are being pushed as snacks. They're trying to interest take-out food places in selling fresh juice.

Sunkist's dream? A system of having peeled, sectioned fruit delivered in quantity, nearly fresh, to institutions. So far, no one has found a way.

Insomnia Is Linked To Emotions

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The trouble with insomniacs, says a UCLA psychiatrist, is they tend to become preoccupied with their sleeplessness.

Studies on insomnia suggest that chromic sleeplessness is associated with moderate to severe personality disturbances as reflected by psychological testing, reports Anthony Kales of UCLA's Brain Research Institute.

Whatever the problems are, insomniacs generally focus on their inability to sleep and show little concern for their emotional difficulties.

The most common variety of insomnia is characterized by chronic inability to fall asleep readily. Other victims of the disorder may fall asleep easily but have persistent difficulty staying asleep.

DRAMA REVIEW

Berkeley's 'Theater' Is Bay's Rising Star

By KARL BARRON

BERKELEY — The Theater at 2980 College Avenue, which opened an exciting version of Moliere's "The Miser" last night, is rapidly becoming one of the Bay Area's most promising producing units.

Now in his second year, former Marinite Michael Leibert, the producer, is seeking (and finding) professional actors of unusual talent who are willing to work for very minimum wages, and he sticks to a fairly classicial schedule. (Set for the future are "Lysistrata," "Playboy of the Western World" and Ionesco's "The Killer.")

"The Duchess of Malfi" was the production before this one, and was such a striking show that I found the Moliere somewhat of a letdown. But this may be the play itself, for it is little more than a character study with an ending right out of Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors."

Leibert, who directed "Duchess," played melodrama with complete seriousness and it worked fantastically well. Robert Mooney, director of "The Miser," has his actors playing for farce and some fail to realize that even farce must be played in deadly seriousness, not tongue in cheek, to succeed.

I also feel that Mooney's great opening gambit is so wild that nothing can really top it. After all, there have been few costume plays in which a lover strips various layers of undergarments from beneath his lady's long skirt and flings them about the stage. This is what Peter Savage does to Karen Ingerthrom before a word is spoken. Where does one go after this: To Calcutta?

However, Mooney achieves lots of pace with no phony "style" and a good feeling of commedia dell'arte. He has Harpagon, the miser, (Keith Jochim) in exaggerated makeup, while the juvenile characters wear none. Bits such as Harpagon's accusing the audience of stealing his money work well, and serve to further involve spectators in the tiny 90-seat playhouse.

Jochim's Harpagon is a very real person, well motivated and delightfully crochety. My only complaint is that in climactic scenes he tends to depend too much on a falsetto break. The character stands in Jochim's own rich tones without need of obvious tricks.

Both Miss Ingerthrom and Holly Barron, who plays Marianne, strive too hard for ingenue quality and as a result, sound slightly mechanical. But both are lovely to look at and will no doubt settle into more believability.

Ken Grantham as Cleante, the "girlish son" of the miser, manages to tread the tightrope successfully between girlishness and loving girls. Savage's Valere is good, although it is tame stuff after seeing his magnificent portrayal of Bosola in "The Duchess of Malfi."

As the matchmaker, Martha Tippin has a lot going for her in both appearance and reading, but overplays badly. This too Mooney will no doubt correct.

Despite my reservations, this is a show I heartily recommend, for it is filled with vitality, is played in a cleverly conceived setting with colorful costuming, and is by far the best resident theater the area has seen, outside of ACT's better efforts.

"The Miser" will play at The Theater, College Avenue just off Ashby, Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock; Thursday and Friday, 8 p.m.; Saturday, 7:30 and 10 p.m., through Decmeber 13. It will then play five performances at the 600-seat Florence Schwimley Theatre on Dec. 18, 19 and 20.

PUCCINI'S THIRTEENTH CENTURY

Florentine opera "Gianni Schicchi" will be presented at 8 p.m. today in the last of three performaces by the Dominican College Opera Theater in Angelico Hall on the San Rafael campus. A quartet in one scene of (left), soprano Roberta Wain, tenor John Graulich and baritone Matthew Miksaki (right). The double program will also present Puccini's Il Tabarro" with baritone Rex Schrader in the leading role. Both productions are under the direction of Arthur Conrad.

MUSIC REVIEW

'Jenufa' Is Magnificent Display Of Beauty, Drama

By MAYBELLE SPECKMAN

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco Opera has another major success in "Jenufa," by the Czech composer Leos Janacek, which will close its 47th season.

Sung in English last night in the first of three performances, the production is being presented for the first time by the San Francisco Opera, and it was a new and thrilling experience for me.

This was because of the beauty and dramatic power of its music, singers who were outstanding in the four principal roles and an excellent conductor.

The story, centered around a young Moravian peasant woman abandoned by one man but given a saving devotion by another, is almost unheard of in opera — a tragedy that ends happily, at least for the lovers.

The color and excitement are all in the music, for the Hager production with Bauer-Ecsy and West as designers, is drab and sombre for the most part except for a few costunes. The sets, however, are in keeping with the grimness of the plot and character of the locale.

Starring as Jenufa, the peasant girl, soprano Felicia Weathers was breathtaking in the enchanting quality of her voice that was especially beautiful in the highest register. She had an advantage, for hers was the loveliest music in the opera. She was moving, too, in the protrayal of the character. Some unflattering costumes detracted from what might have been a more appealing appearance.

Even more impressive for me was Irene Dalis in the contralto role of Jenufa's mother, who murders Jenufa's illegitimate baby in order to free her for a better life. Great agility, wide range, power and a variety of tonal colors were required — all of which Miss Dalis possessed in full measure.

Ragnar Ulfung brought extraordinary qualifications to the role of the weak but charming Steva, father of the baby — a scintillating, facile tenor, handsome looks and — most amazing — an acrobatic prowess that permitted him to perform feats that would do credit to a ballet dancer.

In extreme contrast, the robust, virile tenor of Glade Peterson was magnificent for the volatile but devoted Laca, who marries Jenufa in the end.

Mezzo Sona Cervena performed well as usual in the role of the old grandmother, as did bass Ara Berberian as a mill foreman.

Of the minor characters, soprano Shigemi Matsumoto was delightful as Karolka, betrothed to Steva. Others performing briefly were Margery Tede, known for performances in Marin; Clifford Grant, Donna Peterson, Sheila Marks, Susanne Stull and Mary Jane Bick.

Bringing the Czech conductor Bohumil Gregor, a specialist in the works of Janacek, for his American debut as conductor in this opera was a splendid idea. Janacek's music is reminiscent of Verdi's because of its power to make the music tell the story and to reveal the thoughts and emotions of the character. And Gregor was a master in handling dynamics, tempi and tonal color to accomplish this to perfection.

Choral and ballet participation was creditable but of negligible importance.

Igor Stravinsky Sues For Works

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Composer Igor Stavinsky, whose works include the famed "Firebird Suite," is suing his son-in-law and a lawyer for the return of his manuscripts covering a half a century of music.

Stravinsky said in the suit filed yesterday that he gave the manuscripts, which included rough sketches for the "Firebird Suite," to his son-in-law Andre Marion, and attorney William Montapert on Feb. 17, 1967 for safekeeping.

The composer said that when he and his wife decided to move to New York City earlier this year, he asked that the manuscripts and other papers be turned over to a New York attorney.

Stravinsky said Marion, who had served as his business manager, refused to surrender the papers.

Still No Offer In Strike At Met

NEW YORK (UPI)—The unions whose demands have kept the Metropolitan Opera house dark for more than two months complained yesterday that the Met had failed to deliver its "final" contract offer.

Union negotiator Philip Steinman said the offer—actually intended as the basis for further bargaining—was supposed to have been submitted Thursday in writing.

"They (the Met management), say they won't even have it ready Monday and when they do have it it will be delivered orally," he said. "My answer to them was to go to hell."

Management declined comment except to say a new offer was under consideration.

AVALON (UPI) — The last manually operated switchboard in Pacific Telephone Co. territory in California is on remote Catalina Island, off the coast opposite Los Angeles.

$500,000 In Paintings Stolen From Gallery

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven paintings valued at more than $500,000 have been stolen from a Manhattan gallery while the gallery owner was discussing art thefts with other dealers.

Art dealer Stephen Hahn said yesterday that the impressionist and post-impressionist paintings were taken Wednesday night from his gallery on Madison Avenue.

Basing his argument on their failure to take several avant-garde paintings, including one by Picasso, Hahn described the thieves' taste in art as "conservative."

One of the stolen paintings, a narrow oil of water lilies by Claude Monet, was worth "more than $100,000," he said.

The paintings apparently were stolen when Hahn was at a meeting of the board of directors of the Art Dealers Association of America.

"The main subject we discussed was the thievery that has been going on in New York lately," he said.

Hahn said the thieves apparently picked a lock that he had thought was "unpickable" and forced a second lock to open the gallery door.

The dealer speculated that the thieves might hold the paintings for ransom, since the works are so well known it would be difficult to sell them.

The total mobilized forces in World War I on both sides was 65,038,810 men.

Commuter Plans Still Alive For Smith Ranch Airport

Plans for commuter service from Smith Ranch Airport are alive and well, despite statements to the contrary last week.

Dunham H. Seaton of Golden West Airlines indicated yesterday his firm would seek to establish the service after the 100-acre airfield is annexed to the City of San Rafael.

Seaton told the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce he hopes businessmen will support such items as a request for rezoning the area.

Golden West's proposal was rejected by the Marin County Planning Commission in October and lost on a tie vote when it went before the Marin County Aviation Commission early this month.

The planning commission's decision was appealed to the board of supervisors but dropped Tuesday because of strong neighborhood opposition, according to Benjamin R. Ostlind, representing the airport and the airline.

Ostlind said Nov. 13 he did not intend to apply to the city after annexation is complete. He was not at the chamber meeting.

Seaton told the chamber the airline "is trying to provide a service to Marin County," first to the San Francisco airport and eventually to downtown San Francisco, using VTOL craft, "at a reasonable cost."

A similar operation at Santa Rosa has drawn no complaints, he said.

Several chamber members backed him. Clifford Lund reported he had been at the airport when one of the planes took off and said, "We virtually couldn't hear it."

Chamber President Stanley Goldsmith, commenting that opposition probably stemmed from misinformation, emphasized the airport "couldn't work into a jet airport or anything more than it is now." The planes won't fly over houses, he added.

The chamber took no formal vote on the matter.

In other business, the chamber heard from Joseph J. Garbarino of Marin Sanitary Service in reply to a chamber survey on trash collection rates.

The chamber last week sent a form to businessmen, commenting that "the excessive cost for garbage removal from businesses in San Rafael has once again been brought to our attention," and asked businesses to report the amount and cost of trash for a three-year period.

Garbarino said the base rates for commercial pickups have not gone up in eight years.

However, he reported some businesses just throw their trash out the back door and it has to be picked up by hand. They are charged according to how much time is spent that way, he said.

The chamber gave him a vote of confidence.

The San Rafael Chamber of Commerce also:

INDUSTRIAL AREA — Learned firms in the industrial area of East San Rafael have been reached in a clean-up, fix-up effort but have shown "little interest" in cooperating, Paul Ciampi said.

BUSINESS LICENSE — Heard from S. K. Herzog that the city did not include in the pending business license ordinance a chamber recommendation to charge contractors by number of employees rather than by number of vehicles.

CHRISTMAS — Learned there would be Christmas music and carolers in downtown San Rafael the week before Christmas.

JUVENILE HALL — Learned of a chamber committee effort to have the county administrator investigate destruction in the senior boys unit at Marin County Juvenile Hall.

COURT HOUSE — Approved a resolution promising "aggressive" support to any group which has a plan for the courthouse square, providing it will "enhance the beauty" of the downtown and help retail activity there.

COLLEGE — Agreed to send a letter to the Marin Junior College District board decrying its handling of board meetings. Herzog opposed the idea and defended the board, commenting, "They're right in the middle."

Novato AFROTC Awards Monday

A public awards ceremony will be held Monday at the Novato High School cafeteria by the cadet squadron of the school's Air Force Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Also to be presented are the cadet service award, the cadet extracurricular leadership award and the cadet superior performance award. Col. Walter C. Van Emon and Sgt. Harry Whitlock, instructors in the program, will make the presentations at 1:15 p.m.

New Santa Barbara Drill Capsizes During Protest

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — Sun Oil Co. fished for a 15,000-ton drilling platform today a half-mile from where conservationists were holding a fish-in to protest its installation off their once oil-smeared shores.

The company sent a team of divers down overnight to see if the top of the 230-by-150-foot steel skeleton was damaged when it sank topsy turvy in the Pacific yesterday afternoon.

Company spokesman said improper balance caused it to flip when workmen slid it off a barge. Its eight legs were poking from the ocean's surface six miles offshore.

"It's top might have been dented if it hit the bottom," a Sun spokesman said. "Or it might have been hung up on the bottom. It's in 195 feet of water."

Whether the top was damaged will determine how soon workers can place the platform a half-mile east of a similar rig where an oil well blew out last January, polluting the sea and beaches.

Fearing the new platform means increased chances for another blowout, members of a citizens' committee to Get Oil Out (GOO) began the fish-in Thursday. "We'll hold out," said GOO chairman Al Weingand.

Eight to 10 boats have taken turns anchored around the clock on the proposed drilling site in an effort to impede the company when it tows the platform into position.

The Sun spokesman said his company was "hopeful they (the protesters) will be mature and reasonable and understand that we're working with 15,000 tons of equipment.

"We're just fearful somebody's going to get too close and there could be an accident, and, Lord, we don't want anybody hurt there when they're trying to express what I guess is some kind of conviction," he said.

Ferry Insurance Bid Doubles Estimate

Golden Gate Bridge District directors got a shock yesterday when they opened the single bid for insurance on the Tiburon ferry service now operated by the district.

The bid, $13,262 for liability and hull insurance for three months, was almost double the $7,000 estimate by Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring.

The liability premium, $8,012, was only wide of the mark by $1,000, but he said he had not expected the district to have to pay also for hull insurance, which was bid at $5,250.

The district has been operating one vessel by chartering it from Harbor Carriers, which was shut down by strikers in June. Under final negotiations, the burden for insurance fell on the bridge district.

The bid was by various American and London underwriters. The bid came from the district's regular broker, Marsh and McLennan of San Francisco.

Directors, disappointed in the high bid, referred it to the board's insurance committee for review. Temporarily, the charter is covered by a rider on district policies.

Golden Gate Bridge Directors Also:

INVESTMENTS — Asked the district's attorney, Jerome B. White, to review his previous ruling that the district could not invest in securities issued by agencies of the federal government, instead of in treasury bills. Director Stephan C. Leoudakis of San Francisco said shifting investments to such securities would hike income by up to $200,000 a year.

GREYHOUND — Criticized Greyhound Lines West for getting another fare hike despite the district's cut some years ago of the bus toll to 13 cents — a cut designed to forestall fare hikes. The board's finance committee was urged to act soon on an old proposal that bus tolls be hiked back to $1.

BOLTS — Accepted a low bid of $17,186 by Bethlehem Steel Corp. of San Francisco to furnish about 60,000 high strength bolts.

CLEANING — Accepted a bid of $967 a month from the Cervetto Building Maintenance Co. for janitorial service, and a bid of $260 a month for window cleaning from Dean's Window Cleaning and Janitorial Service.

Charles de Gaulle Quietly Turns 79

PARIS (AP) — Charles de Gaulle is 79 today but as usual there will be no birthday celebration. The man who twice led France out of chaos remained secluded at his country estate in Colombey-Les-Deux-Eglises.

No visitors are expected in the isolated mansion where the former president lives with his wife Yvonne and their elderly housekeeper.

Even while he was president, his birthdays passed unnoticed and his family and staff carefully avoided reminding him of them. He once said of his old enemy, Marshal Philippe Petain, the head of state of Nazi-occupied France, "Old age is a shipwreck."

There is widespread interest in the memoirs he is writing, but no publication date has been set and there have been no leaks about their contents.

The memoirs, following his monumental personal history of World War II, will deal with his return to power in 1958, the decolonization of French Africa and France's odd-man-out role in the Atlantic alliance under his leadership.

His disappearance from public view probably is much to his liking. Friends say he seems to think the voters treated him with ingratitude when they defeated his plan for regional reform. He resigned April 28.

Since then his successor, President Georges Pompidou, has quietly been steering the country back to economic realism and closer cooperation with neighbors and allies, despite the objections of diehard Gaullists like former Defense Minister Pierre Messmer.

Marijuana Case Finally Settled

A case that had been pending in Marin courts for almost two years was finally disposed of yesterday when Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court ruled that Francis Mitchell Orella, 26, of 160 Reservoir Road, San Rafael, had conspired to sell marijuana in November 1967.

The judge dismissed two counts of sale of the weed against Orella, and placed him on probation for a year.

Orella was arrested during a February 1968 narcotics roundup and was tried on the three charges last April by Judge E. Warren McGuire, who found him guilty of conspiracy and one count of sale. Then a new trial was granted Orella on the allegation that his sanity at the time of the offense had not been investigated.

The sanity issue was later dropped, however, and the case submitted on the basis of testimony before the county grand jury, which indicted Orella in 1968.

Elder Protester Carted To Jail

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The police have taken Mr. Simpson to jail.

The feisty 89-year-old full-time picketer, wearing his familiar red and white sandwich board signs, earlier had received three misdemeanor citations for picketing in the capitol in violation of a new state law.

"The D.A. said to issue you one citation", state Police Capt. James Xanders told Robert H. Simpson Friday. "We've issued you three this week."

Xanders then turned to two officers and issued his order: "Take him down and put him in the bucket."

Kidney Transfers

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The Reagan administration says more than 140 kidney transplants have been financed at a cost of $1.5 million through the Medi-Cal state health program.

COMPARE!

BUYING A HOUSE WITH RENTING AN APARTMENT OR WITH OWNING YOUR OWN APARTMENT HOME

In today's highly mobile and changing society, an ever greater number of people are moving into apartments because of the advantages they offer. People today WANT to have a pool. They WANT to spend their leisure time doing things other than yard work and painting. In other words, the apartment dweller is wary of becoming a house buyer for he suspects that his house might absorb his time and money and end up owning him.

It is well known that the renter of an apartment is penalized for his freedom. His rent money isn't buying anything, whereas the homeowner's or apartment homeowner's payments are slowly but surely building up equity. Just as important, the homeowner and apartment homeowner gets to deduct the taxes and interest he's paid out every month from his annual Federal Income Tax return in April.

★ 30 year loan, $14,550. Monthly payment $107.81—annual percentage rate 8½%

Bicyclist Injured As Car Door Swings Open

Odette A. Mattie, 10, of 39 Cole Avenue, Marin City, sustained minor injuries at 4:30 p.m. yesterday when her bicycle collided with a parked car on Drake Avenue in Marin City.

The girl told California Highway Patrol officers she was riding her bicycle on the sidewalk when someone opened a car door and she hit it, knocking her to the pavement. She was treated by her own doctor for a cut mouth and skinned knees.

Chin Cut In Crash

Charles Hinkle, 27, of 278 East Blithedale Avenue, Mill Valley, was treated for a cut chin at Marin General Hospital today after his auto struck a telephone pole at 3:49 a.m. near Sunnyside Avenue and East Blithedale in Mill Valley, police said.

FIRE CALLS

YESTERDAY:

5:15 p.m., San Anselmo — Cardboard boxes stacked against a light fixture ignited in apartment 202 at 25 Richmond Road, causing $100 damage to apartment; occupants' names unknown; neighbors used a fire extinguisher to douse flames.

Russia Is Concerned Over Begging Problem

MOSCOW (Toronto News Service) — Soviet police have much more effective methods in dealing with beggars than police in the West. Nevertheless, begging in the USSR is one of the highest paid professions of this Communist society.

The begging situation has caused deep concern in the Soviet press which has begun a campaign for the eradication of begging. In all probability the antibegging campaign will be as spectacularly unsuccessful as the antidrunkenness campaign which the press occasionally resuscitates.

Komsomolskaya Pravda, newspaper of the Communist Youth League, recently reported the story of an 18-year-old girl, Maria Gracheva, who had finished only two years of school. Maria, her mother, and brother were professional beggars who made enough money to enjoy two-month vacations at expensive Soviet Black Sea resorts.

Begging on Soviet trains and in train stations is quite common. And it was on trains and in stations that the Grachevas made the lion's share of their income, although there were occasional forays into apartment houses. In a sense the family epitomized the Marxist slogan of "to each according to his needs."

One of Maria's ploys was to go on first-class train compartments and explain to passengers that she had sold some of her belongings but still did not have enough for the passage.

Maria made between 20 and 50 rubles per day. During a month she could make up to 1,000 rubles ($1,100); the average pay of Soviet workers is 114 rubles per month, although many workers make less.

Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, has complained that beggars could make enough money to buy private houses with gardens (the so-called dachas which are usually only owned by members of the Soviet ruling class), motorcycles (a very scarce item in a country where only the elite have cars), and expensive radios.

Experience with Communist begging substantiates the Izvestia charges. Newcomers are amazed that the police could be so effective in stamping out illicit political activity but do nothing about begging, prostitution and money-changing.

Soviet police do have very effective means for dealing with beggars. A Soviet citizen needs police permission to live in a Soviet city. If the police do not like a person, they can revoke his residence permit. This means that a beggar can be shipped from the relative comfort of Moscow to the rigors of Siberia.

A key factor in the situation is that Soviet society is going through a severe inflation caused by too much printed money and not enough goods in the stores. People have money to burn or throw away. Much of this money goes into the black market. But there are still excess rubles to give to beggars.

Beard Rich, But Tired

COMBINED AP & UPI

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Frank Beard, the leading money winner of the professional golf tour this season with $175,910 said yesterday he is too tired to play in next week's Heritage Classic at Hilton Head, S.C.

But Beard, home for the Thanksgiving holiday, said he probably will play in the final tournament of the year, the Danny Thomas Tournament at Hollywood, Fla.

"In the last two tournaments, I've played like a ghost," Beard explained.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Jimmy Powell of Yorba Linda, Calif., and Chuck Scally of Coraopolis, Pa., both shot 67s in the first round of the Nevada Open Golf Tournament but Scally had a slight edge, getting his score on the par 72 Paradise Valley course, while Powell played on the par 71 Sahara Nevada Country Club yesterday.

BOXING

TULSA, Okla. — Controversial Cassius Clay, the unbeaten former world heavyweight boxing champion, has agreed to stage a charity bout in Tulsa around the first of the year, fight promoters said yesterday.

Gene Hopkins, whose ranch will be the site of the bout, and Unlimited Sports Activities Association spokesman Hank Moore said proceeds from the proposed fight, for which no opponent has been announced, will go to the Tulsa Association for Retarded Children.

SAN FRANCISCO — Promoter Don Chargin has added another preliminary fight to the Jimmy Lester-Rocky Hernandez main event at the Civic Auditorium Dec. 1.

California bantamweight champion Rudy Villagonza will battle Japan's Shigeyoshi Oki in one of the preliminaries. Leo DeFiore of Portland, Maine, will meet Luis Hernandez in the other preliminary, a featherweight bout.

TIRED GOLDEN TOES

Center Mike O'Brien frames the Marin Catholic High School kicking unit that also consists of holder Sherman Little and kicker Pat Charters (57). The unit shared this week's "Golden Toe" award after getting a tremendous workout in a 69-26 Marin Catholic win over Justin of Napa last Saturday. Charters kicked nine out of ten conversions in the game, believed to be a Marin County record. The award is shared with Terra Linda and San Marin, both of which came up with game-winning field goals. Dave Smith—Meet The U.S. On A Bike

You can almost hear the carny barker spill it out.

See the U.S.A., folks, cross-country, all expenses paid, on 200 ccs some of the time, a van the rest.

It's one way of getting an introduction to America for some of Europe's red-hot motorcycling racing drivers and young Dave Smith, an English lad out of industrial Birmingham, is doing just that, with a seasoned mechanic and rider from Los Angeles along for the ride as aide, mentor and chaperone, all one.

Smith is part of a group of international riders who are on the International Moto-Cross Circuit, a rough and tumble series of races that have careened and meandered across the United States and which is making one of its pit stops at China Camp in a big race beginning at noon tomorrow.

The drivers cut across almost every European nationality. Torsten Hallman is from Sweden, Joel Robert from Belgium, Werner Salersky from East Germany, Vic Allan from Scotland, Jiri Stodulka from Czechoslovakia and a stock of others. They travel separately on the tour.

And there is Smith, who is on his first tour and his first trip to this country. It's a strange way to say how'd-you-do to the United States — buzz in on the weekend, take in whatever sights are available, meet some of the people, then get your hopes up, your lumps and your rides on fantastic courses that are pure works of the imagination.

The places along the way are not exactly the glamor spots of the world. There was freezing-cold Marion, Ohio, and a course plowed and etched out of a flat field, followed by Copetown, Ontario, in Canada, Elk Horn, Wisconsin, Wichita, Kansas, Boulder, Colorado, and only a week ago, rain and mud in Seattle, Wash.

And prior to the tour, when Dave first came over here, he was injured and spent two months in a hospital in San Francisco.

The races themselves can be tough — they're a test of endurance, and an ability to stick things out and go all the way through.

The race is actually a set of three, and you have to finish all three to qualify in the standings. Worse, the European riders, who invariably dominate the race, still can't qualify for whatever money is put up in the pot. That goes to the first American in the standings. But the Europeans are on the tour with the financial blessings of the bike they ride on, the manufacturer.

Dave has been on bikes for over 6½ years, even though in England, there's not much chance to compete or ride, for various reasons.

"The weather's miserable there most of the time," he said. "There's actually very little riding you can do. My brothers and I work in construction most of the week and we fo out on Sundays. So it's like a seven-day work week."

His sidekick on the tour, 32-year-old Ken Gardner, described some of the conditions on the tour.

"It was kind of rough in Seattle," he said. "That was bad. It was muddy, you were really sinking in it. And Ohio was cold and snowing. But surprisingly, the people are really coming out. Things are changing."

"We went to see a football game, in Ohio," Dave said. "Actually, I didn't like it that much, but most of the people are friendly. But there's not that much chance to meet that many, you're in and out all the time."

Dave is impressed by the country, a little bewildered by his introduction, to it, which, to say the least, is hectic.

"It certainly is a big country," he says in the kind of Cockney accent that Michale Caine made famous, one which is really musical once you get used to listening to the words instead of the sounds. "But I wouldn't want to do this all the time. It's too hectic."

Dave is no big winner, no glamor boy. He's a rather nice, shy, honest fellow who happens to love riding.

"You have to be a little tough, forceful," he says. "It's something you want to do You get rid of all your tensions and when you're out there, it's all you think about out."

He's a quiet fellow, who looks just a little homesick, but he's also the kind of fellow who has helped rid cycling of some of its old mythical hell's angel's nightmares. He is human, after all, not somebody that will rape the minister's daughter, peel rubber on the churchsteps and break the store windows. A fellow, if you were in, say, Birmingham, you might meet on the street and like very easily.

That's a smooth sort of thing anybody can understand, a little like the tour he's on, trekking cross country, cycle in town, in a van, a modern prairie trip with no raiding parties, just little things like pillow fights in a motel in Chicago with the rest of the touring riders.

It is a big country, at that.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Knicks find that Philadelphia isn't such a bad place to visit after all.

The Knicks, who couldn't buy a victory in the Liberty Bell city in 1968, returned for another crack last night and bounced the Philadelphia 76ers, 98-94, in National Basketball Association play.

It was the 14th straight victory for the powerhouse Knicks, now three shy of tying the all-time NBA record of 17 victories set by Washington and Boston.

The victory gave the Eastern Division-leading Knicks a 19-1 record. The Knicks suffered their only loss to San Francisco on Oct. 23, the sixth game of their season.

In the night's other NBA games, Atlanta trimmed Detroit 118-106, Cincinnati squashed Chicago 133-119, Baltimore whipped Phoenix 126-116, Los Angeles tripped San Diego 100-98, Milwaukee edged Seattle 117-115 and San Francisco topped Boston 118-115.

In the American Basketball Association, Pittsburgh topped Kentucky 112-108, New York turned back Los Angeles, 94-83, Carolina rolled past Washington, 122-112 and Denver edged Dallas 103-100.

SNUFF RALLY

The Knicks put down a last period Philadelphia rally to top the battling 76ers, who lost their fifth straight and 11th in their last 13 games.

New York led by 13 points, 77-64, starting the fourth period, but the 76ers rallied to close the gap to a basket with 1:14 remaining. A jumper by Hal Greer left the Knicks with a 94-92 lead.

Walt Frazier made one of three foul tries to make it 95-92 Billy Cunningham, who led the 76ers with 25 points, scored a driving layup to close the gap to 95-94. But the 76ers couldn't get any closer as the Knicks nailed it down with three free throws. Willis Reed was high for New York with 25 points.

Bill Bridges, with 27 points, and Joe Caldwell, 26, led six players in double figures as Atlanta buried Detroit. Howard Komives had 20 points and Eddie Miles 19 for the Pistons, who have won only three of their nine home games this year.

ROYAL ROMP

Oscar Robertson drilled in 15 first-quarter points and a total of 44 as the Royals took a lopsided victory over Chicago in a game highlighted by the return to action of former great Bob Cousy. The onetime Boston Celtic star, now coach of the Royals, played ten minutes and scored three points.

Baltimore blew a 15-point lead after sinking 12 of their first 14 shots, but rallied in the second half for the victory over Phoenix. West Unseld and Jack Marin pocketed 26 apiece to lead the Bullets' offense. Dick Van Arsdale had 26 for the Suns.

WEST STARS

Despite playing with a pulled groin muscle suffered last Wednesday, the Lakers' Jerry West went 44 minutes, scored 37 points, had nine assists and seven rebounds. His 22-foot corner jump shot with 29 seconds remaining broke a 96-all tie. Laker rookie Rick Roberson gave Los Angeles a four-point bulget before Art "Hambone" Williams scored for the Rockets at the buzzer.

Elvin Hayes and Jim Barnett each scored 25 points for the Rockets, who had led 54-52 at halftime and 77-75 after three quarters.

Milwaukee held off a late Seattle rally paced by Bob Rule, who made 11 of his 35 points during that span.

With 11 seconds remaining and the Bucks up by 117-114, the Super Sonics' Lucius Allen converted only one of three fouls. Lew Alcindor topped the Bucks with 31 points.

Atlanta May Protest The Protest

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Atlanta Hawks may protest the protest.

The Hawks' 124-122 victory over the Chicago Bulls on Nov. 6 was invalidated by National Basketball Association Commissioner Walter Kennedy yesterday.

Kennedy upheld a Chicago protest and ruled the game must be resumed Feb. 8 with one second remaining and the score tied 124-124. The referees had ruled that Tom Boerwinkle's game-tying basket came after the gun sounded but Kennedy upheld the Bulls' protest that one second actually remained when Boerwinkle tied the game.

Richie Guerin, coach of the Hawks, protested this decision.

"We're going to do something," he said in Detroit. "We're trying to put everything together. We're talking to people on the phone. They haven't taken away our victory yet. We do have a newsreel of the game. I've seen it once. Until we get these pieces together, I have no comment. I was disappointed the protest was upheld. There's a lot of things that haven't been heard of yet in this story."

Miami Romp Eases Pressure On Coach

MIAMI (AP) — "Now we have to get our pass defense ready for Reaves and Alvarez."

Miami Coach Charlie Tate was looking ahead. His unpredictable Hurricanes had just crushed Wake Forest 49-7, but Charlie had next week's Florida game on the brain late last night.

"Well try to mix up our defenses and work on Florida's great offense," Tate said. "It's a challenge, but we'll work our tails off to yive 'em a fight."

SOME RUMBLINGS

Miami is 4-5 and rumblings of Tate's job being in jeopardy have simmered during the week. Although the chunky sixth-year boss of the 'Canes would like to think one game can't mean so much, he knows that upsetting Florida would help turn back the tide of dissenters.

"We've got to do something with Reaves and Alvarez."

Tate spoke often of Gator quarterback John Reaves, who has 22 touchdown passes, and ace receiver Carlos Alvarez.

A Miami television station reported 24 hours before last night's beating of Wake Forest that a group of local businessmen wanted to buy up Tate's contract and get rid of the Hurricane field boss.

Tate said he knew nothing about it.

league games, he wound up with 369 yards and the runnerup slot. Lucas, and quite a few other people, are still wondering what he might have done if he'd started out in the backfield.

"I think Dewey would have played well no matter where you put him," Lucas has said frequently. "If our quarterback had been hurt, Forry probably would have played there."

Forry and quarterback Tom Jackson were named the Trojans' most valuable players for the 1969 championship season and Forry was named to the all-league team as both a back and defensive back.

Perron has been for the past two seasons one of the league's top linebackers. He played on a co-championship team and a mediocre team. He served both just as well but was probably more outstanding this year because it seemed at times that he was doing the entire defensive job by himself.

An all-leaguer for the past two seasons, Perron displayed some of the surest play-diagnosing instincts around. They were remarkably accurate for a high school player. It was his forte and his specialty, busting through, ruining a running play or a pass play before it ever got started. Apparently enough of the coaches in the league remembered him all too well.

"He's one of the finest all-around football players I've ever coached," Novato coach Al Scott has repeatedly said in the past. His selection as MCAL lineman of the year by the coaches seems to bear that out.

THIS DAY IN SPORT

Stands Collapse, Hockey Fans Hurt

CHICAGO (AP) — Thirteen spectators were injured last night when the top railing of the second balcony of Chicago Stadium collapsed under pressure of standing-room customers straining to see a fight on the ice during the Chicago Black Hawks-Boston Bruins National Hockey League game.

None was injured seriously.

Rams-Dallas On TV; Preview Of Playoff?

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Dallas Cowboys and Los Angeles Rms, two clubs who have .38 caliber defenses when it comes to gunning for opposing quarterbacks, will meet tomorrow in what could be a preview of the National Football League's championship game.

Craig Morton of the Cowboys and Roman Gabriel of the Rams will be facing pass rushes that each have thrown quarterbacks 38 times. The Cowboys also have intercepted 17 passes, while the Rams have picked off 18.

Dallas will go into the nationally televised game (CBS, 1 p.m.) before a 76,000-plus sellout crowd at the Los Angeles Coliseum with an 8-1 record and a three-game lead over Washington in the Capitol Division. Los Angeles, 9-0, holds a four-game lead over Baltimore in the Coastal Division.

PROBABILITIES

The Cowboys probably will play the Cleveland Browns, who have a 6-2-1 mark and a three-game lead over St. Louis in the Century Division for the Eastern Conference title, while the Rams likely will meet the Minnesota Vikings, who are 8-1 and hold a two-game lead over Detroit, for the Western Conference crown.

Pittsburgh, 1-8, is at Minnesota and the New York Giants, 3-6, at Cleveland Sunday, while in other NFL action Detroit, 6-3, is at Green Bay, 5-4; Atlanta, 3-6, at Washington, 4-3-2; Baltimore, 5-4, at Chicago, 1-8; San Francisco, 2-6-1, at New Orleans, 2-7, and Philadelphia 3-5-1, at St. Louis, 3-5-1.

On Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, Detroit hosts Minnesota and Dallas entertains San Francisco.

On Thursday, Denver is at Kansas City and San Diego visits Houston.

Los Angeles will count heavily on Gabriel, the NFL's third leading passer and first in touchdown tosses with 18, and the kicking of Bruce Gossett, second in the league with 82 points, in a bid to become the first NFL team to win its first 10 games since Green Bay in 1962.

Conservationists Assail New Pollution Control Proposals

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Belated criticism of one of two tough air pollution control measures being pushed for the statewide 1970 ballot was voiced yesterday by the staff of the Sierra Club.

The petitions are due to be filed Wednesday with county clerks throughout the state, so the Sierra Club criticism was not expected to make a critical difference in the number of signatures gathered.

One measurei s a constitutional amendment that would put the responsibility and cost of cutting pollution on those who cause it. It needs 525,000 signatures to qualify for the ballot.

The other is a statute revision that would impose stringent vehicle smog controls and make it a felony not to abate avoidable industrial pollution. It needs 325,000 signatures to qualify.

One measure can qualify for the ballot without the other.

The Sierra Club's criticism was limited to the second measure, the statute revision, which appears on a green petition. The amendment is on a white petition.

Daniel R. Rosenberg, staff member of the Sierra Club, said the criticism did not represent an official club position yet. The board of directors' next meeting is not scheduled until early December.

But he said the criticism by the club's legal advisers had the endorsement of the president of the club, Phillip Barry of Oakland.

The trouble with the statute measure, Rosenberg said, is that "it is just not politically feasible, much less technically feasible."

The constitutional measure "is general enough to be used eventually to fight air pollution," he said, but the statute is "poorly written."

For example, he said, it would allow a citizen to force any polluter to cut his pollution by 99 per cent within five years — a technical impossibility in many cases. But the statute also would allow a citizen to force consecutive 99 per cuts in pollution each five years.

"It's a grand idea to clean up California's air pollution," Rosenberg said, "and many in the Sierra Club are working hard to do just that, but this isn't the measure to do it."

Both measures have drawn similar criticism from the Marin Conservation League.

Earthquakes May Be An Exciting Nuisance

NEW YORK (BW) — Karl V. Steinbrugge internattionally known earthquake engineer, told a group of Eastern businessmen here Thursday that in the foreseeable future earthquakes may just be an exciting experience and their damage an expensive nuisance.

Steinbrugge, who heads the Earthquake Department, Pacific Fire Rating Bureau, San Francisco, and lectures in earthquake and structural engineering at the University of California, Berkeley, spoke to Eastern investors and mortgage bankers at New York's Bankers' Club.

He was introduced by Henry F. Trione, vice president and head of the Sonoma Mortgage Co. Division, Wells Fargo Bank, sponsor of the annual New York meeting where topical subjects of national interest are presented. Sonoma Mortgage headquarters are in Santa Rosa.

In his speech, entitled "Some Aspects of Earthquake Risk in California," Steinburgge said, "At present we can't prevent earthquakes; we may be able to predict earthquakes some day, but means exist whereby we can reduce the risk to life and property to any degree that we consider to be acceptable."

He pointed out that with continuing progress. "It is possible within the foreseeable future to locate and construct buildings in such a manner that an earthquake will be no more than an exciting experience and with the damage being considered as an expensive nuisance."

Steinbrugge is a member of the execttive committee and chairman, U.S. National Committee of the International Association for Earthquake Engineering and is a consultant to the Atomic Energy Commission, Department of Housing & Urban Development and the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, Department of Commerce.

Key Source Revealed In Alioto Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The former son-in-law of underworld figure Jimmie (the Weasel) Fratianno has been named as the key source of the Look Magazine article linking San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto and the Mafia.

Alioto is suing the magazine for $12.5 million in connection with the article.

His attorney, Maxwell Blecher, yesterday asked through federal court that Look concede that the ex-son-in-law, Tommy Lee Thomas, gave the only information Look had about an alleged meeting between Alioto and purported Mafia at the Nut Tree Restaurant near Sacramento.

The magazine article asserted the diners met to discuss formation of the First San Francisco National Bank, which later merged with Commonwealth National Bank.

Thomas, a Sacramento appraiser, formerly was married to Fratianno's daughter and was also an officer of the Fratianno Trucking Co.

With his federal court "request for admissions" filed under pre-trial discovery rules, Blecher yesterday attached statements from 70 staff employes of the Nut Tree that none of them ever recalled seeing the mayor with any of the alleged Mafia figures, pictured in the magazine.

The 70 employes also said they had not been questioned by any representative of Look prior to the article.

Perron, Forry 'Preps Of The Year'

Terra Linda's overnight running star Dewey Forry and Novato's super-charging linebacker Dave Perron are the Marin County Athletic League's back and lineman of the year, as picked on a 1-2-3 vote by MCAL coaches.

Forrey appeared on everybody's list no lower than second while Perron picked up four first-place votes to emerge as the top lineman.

Appearing consistently on the back of the year lists were Terra Linda halfback and kicker Bob Daniele, Trojan quarterback Tom Jackson and San Rafael super-soph Scott Duncan. Others receiving votes were San Rafael quarterback Lowell Widmer, San Marin quarterback Ken Gnoss and Tamalpais halfback Clifford Hall.

Other linemen appearing more than once on the list were Kerry Atkinson, tackle from San Marin, Terra Linda guard and linebacker Chris Fenton, Trojan tackle Bruce Little and Redwood tackle Tom Wickert. Others receiving votes were Novato tackle Russ Weklych, Redwood center Phil Simon, Redwood linebacker Rick Puccinelli, and San Rafael guard Dan Jordan.

Forry impressed people in an awfully short time, at least as far as his running abilities were concerned. They already knew he was a fine "monster" man on defense and an outstanding tight end. But until the final three games of the season, he was almost a complete unknown as a runner, simply because he hadn't played in the backfield.

That changed rather quickly when injuries forced Terra Linda coach Don Lucas into doing some more juggling, putting Forry in at a halfback slot against San Marin as the season wound into its last three crucial games.

Forry responded with 156 yards his first time out. He got 125 against Redwood in the following week, and 87 more against San Rafael, even though he played just a little more than half the game after an injury early in the game.

That rapid surge earned him I-J Prep of the Week honors two weeks in a row, something that's never happened and vaulted him into the league rushing lead, at least temporarily.

He eventually lost the crown to Duncan, who picked up 210 yards against the Trojans. But for working in just half the

Cassius Is Just His Street Name

I always thought Jack Johnson was one of the bravest men in the history of the world, at least one of the most unafraid, which is not always the same thing.

He didn't hate the white man, he mocked him. He helped himself to his women, beat up his champions, and strutted through his society without, so to speak, wiping his feet or taking his hat off. In a sense, he put his feet up on life's furniture, flicked ashes on its rug, and laughed uproariously at the stricken looks of his hosts.

The Congress of the United States, no less, honored him with a law which made it illegal to transport young ladies across state lines, particularly young ladies whose means of support were all too visible. So, Johnson took one across the ocean. He didn't fight bigotry, he ignored it. He got into the ring in front of potential lynch mobs and coolly pulverized its heroes and jeered at it while he did so. I'm sure he would have literally died laughing — a great, gold-toothed Jovian laugh that would have taken all the fun out of killing him.

At 20th Century-Fox

He left the world a legacy, the phrase, "The Great White Hope," the funniest joke of all, and they're making a movie about it over at 20th Century-Fox. One of the journalists covering it is another former heavyweight champion of the world, the Sheik of Kentucky, the Caliph of Chicago, the Pharoah of Pugilism, the Hyacinth in the Garden of Allah, Cassius Marcellus Muhammad Ali Clay, the heavyweight champion of Islam.

They took back his prayer rug, the government has him in a corner where he can't apparently jab his way out, but life still can't lay a glove on him. He keeps surfacing in another corner of the ring as usual, jeering, "Yah! Missed me again!"

The historical parallel between his career and Johnson's has not escaped his attention, but he feels that in his capacity for public suffering, he makes Johnson look like a stool pigeon by comparison.

"I tell you, I have it a lot worse than Jack Johnson. Look, Jack Johnson, he was in the age of the red neck and the lynch law. But me, I'm in 1970. This is the INTEGRATIN' age, the golden age of brotherhood. I can't skip over to Europe. They took my passport. I'm the baddest man in the whole country. I'm in JAIL right now. I'm the onliest champion in history lost his title while he was still undefeated."

He never went to one, but he lectures at colleges — at $2,000 a throw, which proves, I guess, that while you can't shoot your way into the U.N., you can punch your way into college. "I discuss the No. 1 problem in the country right now, the race problem," he said.

Not Difficult For Him

It's not difficult for him. He's an ardent segregationist. He differs from Senator Bilbo only that he wishes the white man would go back where he came from.

His name, which is a source of confusion during his temporary excommunication, has proved fissionable, and is now split into two equal parts. He points to an ad in a New York paper. It told of his appearance in a forthcoming play, "Big Time Buck White," on Broadway, and, in small type, it read "Muhammad Ali," followed by the initials "A. K. A." (for "also known as") and then, in big type, "Cassius Clay."

" 'Cassius Clay' is just my street name," explained Mr. Also-Known-As. " 'Muhammad Ali' is my holy name. How would it look for THAT to be splattered all over Broadway?"

Lest Richard Burton or Sidney Poitier feel threatened, A. K. A. Cassius Clay wants it known that his show biz career will be over as soon as he is reinstated in his religion.

Neither is he likely to go into Shakespeare since he does not plan to follow the script too closely, but rather ad-lib it, and Hamlet might be tougher to ad-lib than Aida.

'Nothing Immoral Or Dirty'

The play has had its mouth washed out with soap by A. K. A. Cassius Clay. "I made 'em take the profanity out. No girls, no nudes. Not gonna let anybody in if they have alcohol on their breath. No smoking. Nothing immoral or dirty."

Lest anybody get the idea it's a remake of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," the score has songs like "We Came in Chains," "Black Balloon," "Better," and "It's All Over Now, Mighty Whitey," none of them by George M. Cohan.

Cassius concedes that all this may become academic and that he may shortly exchange all this and become simply A. K. A. 56791023 Leavenworth. "I almost wanna go to prison now," he says. "It will make my life story that much more colorful when they do it on film."

It was clear he thought "The Great White Hope," while an interesting period piece, was just a walk-on bout on this card. The REAL story in interesting stereo, color, wide screen, and a cast of thousands is still to come. And, as he pinched the bridge of his nose, kicked off his shoes, and dropped off to sleep, perchance to dream, I thought, as I tip-toed out, I could hear the great roaring gold-tooth sound of a dead man's laughter ringing through the studio.

Rugged Test For Raiders

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Oakland Raiders have scored more points than any team in the American Football League except the Kansas City Chiefs.

The Chiefs have given up the fewest points in the league. Except nobody.

The Raiders and Chiefs battle here tomorrow in a game that will give the winner clear title to the AFL's Western Division lead. (It will be televised by NBC at 1 p.m., PST.)

The oddsmakers, obviously impressed with the Chiefs' 34-16 victory over the Super Bowl champion New York Jets last week, have installed Kansas City as a 4½ point favorite to fatten its record to 10-1 while dropping the Raiders to 8-2-1.

A defeat would not kill the Raiders' hopes of repeating as Western Division champs, but it would hurt them severely. The two teams meet again Dec. 13 in Oakland.

MIGHTY DEFENSE

Both the Raiders and Chiefs have averaged 27.6 points per game this season while Kansas City has given up just 10.4 per game to Oakland's 18.1 The Chiefs lead the AFL in no fewer than 19 defensive departments.

The top defensive aim of the Chiefs is to stop Oakland quarterback Daryle Lamonica before he gets a chance to throw. The Kansas City defense has dropped opposing quarterbacks 42 times this year and lead the league in that department.

Lamonica, however, is ranked third among AFL quarterbacks and has thrown 27 touchdown passes, more than twice as many as any other thrower in the league. An 80-yard bomb to Warren Wells late in the game last week saved a 21-16 victory over San Diego.

TOP RUNNERS

Kansas City runners Mike Garrett, Bob Holmes and Warren McVea have each gained over 400 yards while Charlie Smith, Hewritt Dixon and Pete Banasak are the Raiders' top rushers.

Len Dawson, the Chiefs' quarterback, ranks sixth among the AFL passers even though he missed six games with an injured knee. His completion average of 60 per cent leads the league.

The Oakland-Kansas City rivalry has rapidly turned into one of the most intense in the league. Last year, the two teams took turns beating each other during the regular season.

They tied for the Western Division title and met in Oakland in a playoff game. The Raiders won 41-6 and the Chiefs haven't forgotten.

HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALLERS READY TO GO

Brace yourself, sports fans. High school basketball season is about ready to burst on the Marin-Sonoma County athletic scene.

The prep cage season opens full force next Wednesday when seven Marin County teams open their season.

49ers In TV Tilt Tomorrow

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers, hoping they have hit their stride at last, start a bruising road trip when they meet the New Orleans Saints here tomorrow.

The 49ers move on to Dallas after this game for a contest with the Cowboys on Thanksgiving Day, just four days later.

(Tomorrow's game will be televised by CBS at 11 a.m.)

Now 2-6-1, the 49ers played by far their best game of the season at home last Sunday when they toppled the defending National Football League champion Baltimore Colts for the second time, 20-17.

John Brodie, troubled with an injured elbow, had one of the finest performances of his career, tying a club record with 29 completions in 37 attempts for 290 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

VICTORY PASS

The second scoring pass went to rookie Jimmy Thomas with 1:45 left to play to ensure a comeback victory.

The 49ers tomorrow meet a club that also won its second game of the season last week — the Saints have lost seven — when Tom Dempsey's fourth field goal of the day provided a 25-24 defeat of the New York Giants with just five seconds left.

The 49ers welcome the return of defensive back Kermit Alexander, recovered from a shoulder separation. New Orleans will be missing starting safety Bobby Thompson after surgery on his Achilles tendon.

Bill Kilmer, once a 49er, will be at quarterback for the Saints with Andy Livingston, who carried 20 times for 74 yards against the Giants, at running back.

Hockey Bad Boys Face Assault Rap

OTTAWA (AP) —City police have sworn out charges against defenseman Ted Green of the Boston Bruins and rookie Wayne Maki of St. Louis for assault causing bodily harm, it was revealed today.

The charges arise out of a stick duel during an exhibition hockey game here Sept. 21 between the Blues and the Bruins.

Green's skull was fractured. He was in a hospital for several weeks, and his hockey future is uncertain.

The charges were sworn out yesterday before Justice of the Peace D. J. McLoughney. Then summonses were mailed to the hockey players. Del Dupuis, Ottawa-Carleton Provincial court clerk, confirmed the charges today.

FINED $300

Maki and Green were given match penalties for their first-period fight. A match penalty carries an automatic $300 fine. Maki, now with the Buffalo Bisons of the American League, was later suspended for 30 days by President Clarence Campbell of the National League.

Green will be suspended for the first 13 league or playoff games after he has been declared fit to play again.

There was no indication as to when the charges will go to court. They carry a maximum of two years in prison.

Warriors, Lakers Triumph; Clash Tonight At 'Palace'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Warriors may be up against their sternest test of the young National Basketball Association season tonight when they battle the Los Angeles Lakers at the Cow Palace, 8 o'clock.

The Warriors have won two straight games after snapping a six game losing streak. But they still are a game below .500, with an 8-9 record in the NBA West. San Francisco trails first place Atlanta by four and a half games and would like to put a winning string together.

But the Lakers have been going great guns despite the loss of center Wilt Chamberlain, and a win over Los Angeles would solidify suspicions that the Warriors' attack is clicking again.

San Francisco downed Boston last night, 118-115, as four Warriors hit 20 or more points before a crowd of 5,525 at the Cow Palace.

Center Nate Thurmond led the way with 30 points, 24 of them in the second half and four in the final 90 seconds.

The Warriors broke a 96-96 tie with eight minutes to play and remained ahead for the rest of the game. Guard Fritz Williams scored the tie breaking basket and then hit three more in a row to give the Warriors a 106-100 lead with five minutes to play.

The Celtics cut the margin to 116-113 on a basket by Emmette Bryant but Jerry Lucas clinched the victory for the Warriors with a pair of free throws with three seconds left.

HAVLICEK HIGH

John Havlicek was the leading scorer for Boston with 27 points and Bryant had 19.

Williams had 26, Lucas 25 and Jeff Mullins 20 for the Warriors who won their second straight, running their season record to 8-9. The defeat snapped a two-game win string for Boston and dropped them to a 5-12 mark on the year.

CIVILIAN DIRECTOR

Navy Breaks Tradition To Boost Grid Fortunes

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to renew its football fortunes, the Naval Academy will have a civilian as its athletic director beginning next summer—the first time a non-military man has served in the post.

Capt. J. O. Bo Coppedge, a 1947 academy graduate, will retire after 24 years in the Navy to become the first civilian athletic director, a position he has held since June of last year.

Rear Adm. James Calvert, superintendent of the Naval Academy, said the school made the change in policy because the appointment of a civilian "is absolutely essential if the Naval Academy's program is to catch and overtake those on our schedule in football and 20 other sports."

Navy has a record of one victory and eight losses and plays arch rival Army next Saturday. It won only two games last season.

"It is a tribute to the caliber of the men who have served in the athletic director's chair that the program has advanced at all," he said. "By constantly changing our athletic director every two or three years we have destroyed continuity which is successful to an effective athletic administration."

Coppedge is the 26th military man to serve as athletic director since 1910, the first year the names were recorded.

Seals Face Montreal, N.Y.

MONTREAL (AP)—After ending a seven-game drought, the Oakland Seals have a rugged weekend lineup, playing the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens here tonight and the New York Rangers Sunday.

Both teams pummeled the Seals the last time they met in Oakland; Montreal winning' 8-1 and New York scoring a 5-0. shutout.

The Seals snapped a seven-game winless streak with 4-2 over Minnesota Wednesday.

The Seals sent rookies Tony Featherstone and Joe Hardy down to their Providence farm club Friday for at least two weeks. They said they might call up a couple of replacements in time for this weekend's games.

Dave Smith—Meet The U.S. On A Bike

You can almost hear the carny barker spill it out.

See the U.S.A., folks, cross-country, all expenses paid, on 200 ccs some of the time, a van the rest.

It's one way of getting an introduction to America for some of Europe's red-hot motorcycling racing drivers and young Dave Smith, an English lad out of industrial Birmingham, is doing just that, with a seasoned mechanic and rider from Los Angeles along for the ride as aide, mentor and chaperone, all one.

Smith is part of a group of international riders who are on the International Moto-Cross Circuit, a rough and tumble series of races that have careened and meandered across the United States and which is making one of its pit stops at China Camp in a big race beginning at noon tomorrow.

The drivers cut across almost every European nationality. Torsten Hallman is from Sweden, Joel Robert from Belgium, Werner Salersky from East Germany, Vic Allan from Scotland, Jiri Stodulka from Czechoslovakia and a stock of others. They travel separately on the tour.

And there is Smith, who is on his first tour and his first trip to this country. It's a strange way to say how'd-you-do to the United States — buzz in on the weekend, take in whatever sights are available, meet some of the people, then get your hopes up, your lumps and your rides on fantastic courses that are pure works of the imagination.

The places along the way are not exactly the glamor spots of the world. There was freezing-cold Marion, Ohio, and a course plowed and etched out of a flat field, followed by Copetown, Ontario, in Canada, Elk Horn, Wisconsin, Wichita, Kansas, Boulder, Colorado, and only a week ago, rain and mud in Seattle, Wash.

And prior to the tour, when Dave first came over here, he was injured and spent two months in a hospital in San Francisco.

The races themselves can be tough — they're a test of endurance, and an ability to stick things out and go all the way through.

The race is actually a set of three, and you have to finish all three to qualify in the standings. Worse, the European riders, who invariably dominate the race, still can't qualify for whatever money is put up in the pot. That goes to the first American in the standings. But the Europeans are on the tour with the financial blessings of the bike they ride on, the manufacturer.

Dave has been on bikes for over 6½ years, even though in England, there's not much chance to compete or ride, for various reasons.

"The weather's miserable there most of the time," he said. "There's actually very little riding you can do. My brothers and I work in construction most of the week and we fo out on Sundays. So it's like a seven-day work week."

His sidekick on the tour, 32-year-old Ken Gardner, described some of the conditions on the tour.

"It was kind of rough in Seattle," he said. "That was bad. It was muddy, you were really sinking in it. And Ohio was cold and snowing. But surprisingly, the people are really coming out. Things are changing."

"We went to see a football game, in Ohio," Dave said. "Actually, I didn't like it that much, but most of the people are friendly. But there's not that much chance to meet that many, you're in and out all the time."

Dave is impressed by the country, a little bewildered by his introduction, to it, which, to say the least, is hectic.

"It certainly is a big country," he says in the kind of Cockney accent that Michale Caine made famous, one which is really musical once you get used to listening to the words instead of the sounds. "But I wouldn't want to do this all the time. It's too hectic."

Dave is no big winner, no glamor boy. He's a rather nice, shy, honest fellow who happens to love riding.

"You have to be a little tough, forceful," he says. "It's something you want to do You get rid of all your tensions and when you're out there, it's all you think about out."

He's a quiet fellow, who looks just a little homesick, but he's also the kind of fellow who has helped rid cycling of some of its old mythical hell's angel's nightmares. He is human, after all, not somebody that will rape the minister's daughter, peel rubber on the churchsteps and break the store windows. A fellow, if you were in, say, Birmingham, you might meet on the street and like very easily.

That's a smooth sort of thing anybody can understand, a little like the tour he's on, trekking cross country, cycle in town, in a van, a modern prairie trip with no raiding parties, just little things like pillow fights in a motel in Chicago with the rest of the touring riders.

It is a big country, at that.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Knicks find that Philadelphia isn't such a bad place to visit after all.

The Knicks, who couldn't buy a victory in the Liberty Bell city in 1968, returned for another crack last night and bounced the Philadelphia 76ers, 98-94, in National Basketball Association play.

It was the 14th straight victory for the powerhouse Knicks, now three shy of tying the all-time NBA record of 17 victories set by Washington and Boston.

The victory gave the Eastern Division-leading Knicks a 19-1 record. The Knicks suffered their only loss to San Francisco on Oct. 23, the sixth game of their season.

In the night's other NBA games, Atlanta trimmed Detroit 118-106, Cincinnati squashed Chicago 133-119, Baltimore whipped Phoenix 126-116, Los Angeles tripped San Diego 100-98, Milwaukee edged Seattle 117-115 and San Francisco topped Boston 118-115.

In the American Basketball Association, Pittsburgh topped Kentucky 112-108, New York turned back Los Angeles, 94-83, Carolina rolled past Washington, 122-112 and Denver edged Dallas 103-100.

SNUFF RALLY

The Knicks put down a last period Philadelphia rally to top the battling 76ers, who lost their fifth straight and 11th in their last 13 games.

New York led by 13 points, 77-64, starting the fourth period, but the 76ers rallied to close the gap to a basket with 1:14 remaining. A jumper by Hal Greer left the Knicks with a 94-92 lead.

Walt Frazier made one of three foul tries to make it 95-92 Billy Cunningham, who led the 76ers with 25 points, scored a driving layup to close the gap to 95-94. But the 76ers couldn't get any closer as the Knicks nailed it down with three free throws. Willis Reed was high for New York with 25 points.

Bill Bridges, with 27 points, and Joe Caldwell, 26, led six players in double figures as Atlanta buried Detroit. Howard Komives had 20 points and Eddie Miles 19 for the Pistons, who have won only three of their nine home games this year.

ROYAL ROMP

Oscar Robertson drilled in 15 first-quarter points and a total of 44 as the Royals took a lopsided victory over Chicago in a game highlighted by the return to action of former great Bob Cousy. The onetime Boston Celtic star, now coach of the Royals, played ten minutes and scored three points.

Baltimore blew a 15-point lead after sinking 12 of their first 14 shots, but rallied in the second half for the victory over Phoenix. West Unseld and Jack Marin pocketed 26 apiece to lead the Bullets' offense. Dick Van Arsdale had 26 for the Suns.

WEST STARS

Despite playing with a pulled groin muscle suffered last Wednesday, the Lakers' Jerry West went 44 minutes, scored 37 points, had nine assists and seven rebounds. His 22-foot corner jump shot with 29 seconds remaining broke a 96-all tie. Laker rookie Rick Roberson gave Los Angeles a four-point bulget before Art "Hambone" Williams scored for the Rockets at the buzzer.

Elvin Hayes and Jim Barnett each scored 25 points for the Rockets, who had led 54-52 at halftime and 77-75 after three quarters.

Milwaukee held off a late Seattle rally paced by Bob Rule, who made 11 of his 35 points during that span.

With 11 seconds remaining and the Bucks up by 117-114, the Super Sonics' Lucius Allen converted only one of three fouls. Lew Alcindor topped the Bucks with 31 points.

Atlanta May Protest The Protest

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Atlanta Hawks may protest the protest.

The Hawks' 124-122 victory over the Chicago Bulls on Nov. 6 was invalidated by National Basketball Association Commissioner Walter Kennedy yesterday.

Kennedy upheld a Chicago protest and ruled the game must be resumed Feb. 8 with one second remaining and the score tied 124-124. The referees had ruled that Tom Boerwinkle's game-tying basket came after the gun sounded but Kennedy upheld the Bulls' protest that one second actually remained when Boerwinkle tied the game.

Richie Guerin, coach of the Hawks, protested this decision.

"We're going to do something," he said in Detroit. "We're trying to put everything together. We're talking to people on the phone. They haven't taken away our victory yet. We do have a newsreel of the game. I've seen it once. Until we get these pieces together, I have no comment. I was disappointed the protest was upheld. There's a lot of things that haven't been heard of yet in this story."

Stands Collapse, Hockey Fans Hurt

Rams-Dallas On TV; Preview Of Playoff?

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Dallas Cowboys and Los Angeles Rms, two clubs who have .38 caliber defenses when it comes to gunning for opposing quarterbacks, will meet tomorrow in what could be a preview of the National Football League's championship game.

Craig Morton of the Cowboys and Roman Gabriel of the Rams will be facing pass rushes that each have thrown quarterbacks 38 times. The Cowboys also have intercepted 17 passes, while the Rams have picked off 18.

Dallas will go into the nationally televised game (CBS, 1 p.m.) before a 76,000-plus sellout crowd at the Los Angeles Coliseum with an 8-1 record and a three-game lead over Washington in the Capitol Division. Los Angeles, 9-0, holds a four-game lead over Baltimore in the Coastal Division.

PROBABILITIES

The Cowboys probably will play the Cleveland Browns, who have a 6-2-1 mark and a three-game lead over St. Louis in the Century Division for the Eastern Conference title, while the Rams likely will meet the Minnesota Vikings, who are 8-1 and hold a two-game lead over Detroit, for the Western Conference crown.

Pittsburgh, 1-8, is at Minnesota and the New York Giants, 3-6, at Cleveland Sunday, while in other NFL action Detroit, 6-3, is at Green Bay, 5-4; Atlanta, 3-6, at Washington, 4-3-2; Baltimore, 5-4, at Chicago, 1-8; San Francisco, 2-6-1, at New Orleans, 2-7, and Philadelphia 3-5-1, at St. Louis, 3-5-1.

On Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, Detroit hosts Minnesota and Dallas entertains San Francisco.

On Thursday, Denver is at Kansas City and San Diego visits Houston.

Los Angeles will count heavily on Gabriel, the NFL's third leading passer and first in touchdown tosses with 18, and the kicking of Bruce Gossett, second in the league with 82 points, in a bid to become the first NFL team to win its first 10 games since Green Bay in 1962.

Miami Romp Eases Pressure On Coach

MIAMI (AP) — "Now we have to get our pass defense ready for Reaves and Alvarez."

Miami Coach Charlie Tate was looking ahead. His unpredictable Hurricanes had just crushed Wake Forest 49-7, but Charlie had next week's Florida game on the brain late last night.

"Well try to mix up our defenses and work on Florida's great offense," Tate said. "It's a challenge, but we'll work our tails off to yive 'em a fight."

SOME RUMBLINGS

Miami is 4-5 and rumblings of Tate's job being in jeopardy have simmered during the week. Although the chunky sixth-year boss of the 'Canes would like to think one game can't mean so much, he knows that upsetting Florida would help turn back the tide of dissenters.

Tate spoke often of Gator quarterback John Reaves, who has 22 touchdown passes, and ace receiver Carlos Alvarez.

A Miami television station reported 24 hours before last night's beating of Wake Forest that a group of local businessmen wanted to buy up Tate's contract and get rid of the Hurricane field boss.

Tate said he knew nothing about it.

league games, he wound up with 369 yards and the runnerup slot. Lucas, and quite a few other people, are still wondering what he might have done if he'd started out in the backfield.

"I think Dewey would have played well no matter where you put him," Lucas has said frequently. "If our quarterback had been hurt, Forry probably would have played there."

Forry and quarterback Tom Jackson were named the Trojans' most valuable players for the 1969 championship season and Forry was named to the all-league team as both a back and defensive back.

Perron has been for the past two seasons one of the league's top linebackers. He played on a co-championship team and a mediocre team. He served both just as well but was probably more outstanding this year because it seemed at times that he was doing the entire defensive job by himself.

An all-leaguer for the past two seasons, Perron displayed some of the surest play-diagnosing instincts around. They were remarkably accurate for a high school player. It was his forte and his specialty, busting through, ruining a running play or a pass play before it ever got started. Apparently enough of the coaches in the league remembered him all too well.

"He's one of the finest all-around football players I've ever coached," Novato coach Al Scott has repeatedly said in the past. His selection as MCAL lineman of the year by the coaches seems to bear that out.

Advice To Raiders: Lose To The Chiefs

OAKLAND — The Raider game plan for the rest of the year — a plan that will lead them into the Super Bowl — is now so apparent that I expect a call momentarily from Coach John Madden.

On the chance he's concerned about message units, I'll spell it out for him here, or perhaps send it via wire at Western Union's new "public opinion" rate.

ACTUALLY A single word will cover my advice to large John: lose. That is, lose the two regular season contests to Kansas City, not only lose but get dumped. On Sunday in K.C. and here on Dec. 13, the Raiders should without question play their poorest ball of the season.

The goal is marvelously primitive in its conception. If Oakland shows no offense and less defense to the Chiefs in those games, Kansas City won't know what to expect when, as I expect, these teams meet for the American Football League championship on Jan. 4 in K.C.

IN THAT game, Madden's fellows can explode with tactics the Chiefs will find confusing — confusing because they'll be lulled into assuming they're playing the 1944 Chi-Pitt Cardsteelers, a team that did indeed exist, and was awful.

I know that Madden and his lads have this "pride and poise" thing and do so hate to lose. But this "Retreat When Advisable" plan merits their attention. I mean, San Diego quarterback John Hadl assumes the Chiefs will beat the Raiders anyway, as do several other Chargers.

"The Chiefs are tougher," says S. D. safety Ken Graham. "They hit harder."

"KANSAS CITY is tougher physically up front," says quarterback Hadl. "I think they're the best Chief team I've ever seen."

And Speedy Duncan, whose lengthy pass theft almost destroyed the desultory Oaklands last week here, suggests Kansas City "flies too powerfully for the Raiders to catch." The Chiefs, says the mystical Mr. Duncan, "are in outer space." Does Missouri know that?

Should the Raiders decide to go all out on Sunday, though, thus ignoring my brilliant theorem, they would be back in first place and thus face the pressure of staying there. Lance Alworth, a contrary San Diego voice, is of the opinion the Chiefs have a psychological block about Oakland and that the Raiders always win the big ones.

IN THE WESTERN Division title playoff last year, the Chiefs folded and the Raiders floated by 41-6. So Alworth is not speaking untowardly.

But the only fellas whose reactions will count on Sunday are named Dawson and McVea, Garrett and Taylor. They're probably talking over their game plan now. Say, you don't think they're considering the possibility of losing both regular season games to the Raiders so that in the title match the Raiders will be lulled into . . .

Hooting Fans Spur Ex-Champion To Win

By HAL BOCK

NEW YORK (AP) — Carlos Ortiz brought some help with him for his first fight in 17 months and he needed it.

Many of the 8,731 fans who came to Madison Square Garden last night to watch Ortiz battle Brazil's Edmundo Liete, were Carlos' friends and neighbors from the Bronx.

And when they started a chorus of shrill whistles and hoots midway through the fight to indicate their disastisfaction with Ortiz' performance, it seemed to perk Carlos up. He came on the take a 10-round split decision.

Ortiz was lethargic in the early going, clearly showing the rust accumulated in his layoff. Carlos had been out of action since June 28, 1968 when he lost the light weight title to Teo Cruz.

Ortiz had been involved in a thriving liquor business and nightclub in the Bronx. But he tired of people asking him when he'd fight again and decided to step up to the welterweight division, picking Liete for his first move toward a possible title shot with Jose Napoles, the division champ.

Leite claimed Ortiz was "holding all the time. I couldn't fight at all. In South America they don't allow that. I was surprised that a fighter of Ortiz' fame had to resort to such tactics."

Judge Tony Castellano had it 7-3 for Ortiz and judge John Maschio gave Carlos the nod, 4-3 with three rounds even. Referee Barney Phelan had the fight a draw at 4-4-2. The Associated Press' card showed Ortiz ahead, 4-3-3.

The victory ran his career record to 52-6-1. Liete, making only his second appearance in this country, is 36-3-5.

Cousy Comeback Nets 3 Points

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Coach Bob Cousy returned to professional basketball as a player Friday night in a performance he felt was far from the style that brought him fame as one of the game's best - ever backcourt men.

The fans loved him.

Cousy, 41, tallied three points as he made his only field goal attempt and lone free throw. He added two assists and two rebounds during a 10-minute stint in the third period of Cincinnati's 133-119 victory over Chicago.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Nov. 22, the 326th day of 1969 with 39 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Venus and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1852, the second French empire gained recognition when more than seven million persons voted to back the regime of Emperor Napoleon III.

In 1950, a train wreck just outside New York at the peak of the evening rush hour killed 79 persons.

In 1960, the United States launched the Ethan Allen, its then most powerful atomic submarine.

In 1963, President John F. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas. Vice President Lyndon Johnson was sworn in as chief executive a short time later.

A thought for the day: Gen. William Sherman said: "It am tired and sick of war. Its glory is all moonshine. it is only those who neither fired a shot nor heard the shrieks and groans of the wounded who cry aloud for blood, more vengeance, more desolation. War is hell."

Plight Of Jobless In Kentucky Counties

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)— There are nearly one million residents of the 49 Appalachian counties of Kentucky, but only about 217,000 jobs, including 165,000 in nonagricultural pursuits.

Manufacturing provides about 33,000 of the jobs in the area. At least 100,000 additional jobs would be required to correct the region's blighted economy.

WORD-A-DAY

BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Expert Remembers When He Disregarded A Golden Rule

When I'm in a preachy mood I advise bridge players to say nothing at all during the play of a hand. Mind you, this is good advice, but it's easier to give than to take. Disregarding it once got me into an embarrassing situation.

CLUB PROBLEM

West led the queen of spades, and I won in dummy with the ace. I saw that I was sure to lose three diamonds and that I had to avoid the loss of a club.

The correct play is routine for an old sinner like your columnist. Declarer must draw only two rounds of trumps. Then he cashes the three top clubs even though at least one trump is still out.

This play is safe if the missing clubs break evenly, since both opponents will follow suit. If the clubs don't break evenly, South's only hope is that the player who is short in clubs is also short in trumps.

BRIGHT REMARK

I drew two rounds of trumps with the jack and ace, and then started on the clubs, brightly remarking: "This is safe, as long as I drew all of the trumps."

My partner, who happened to be glancing at the hand at her right, gave me a peculiar look and almost spoke up. She could see that West still had a trump.

I continued with the top clubs and ruffed the last club in dummy. Then I ruffed a spade and led the king of trumps. West followed suit, and my partner could speak at last. "I'm used to partners who can count trumps," she said.

MANY YEARS AGO

That was many years ago, and the lady still believes that I can't count to 13. "Anybody can write a bridge book," she once remarked in my hearing. "I'd write one myself if I had nothing better to do with my time."

DAILY QUESTION

You open with one heart, partner raises to three hearts, and it is up to you again.

You hold:

♥ A K J 10 3
♣ A K Q 4.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid four clubs.

This is a mild slam try. If partner can make some encouraging bid, such as four diamonds, you will make another cautious move toward slam. If partner signs off by bidding four hearts over four clubs, you will stop at game.

Black Studies Again Threaten College Explosion

San Francisco State College's problem department is again haunting S. I. Hayakawa, the college president.

It is the same department that kept the college in constant uproar, with the campus thronged by police and evidence of an educational environment hard to find, for three months during the last school year.

The name of the department is Black Studies.

LAST YEAR'S prolonged agony was commenced when the Black Students Union, dissatisfied with what the college was doing about setting up a black studies department, on Nov. 5, 1968, presented its notorious "10 non-negotiable demands." These proved sufficient to force Robert D. Smith, a former San Rafael High School teacher, out of the college presidency.

During the unrest that followed, Nathan Hare, who had been fired from all-black Howard University in Washington, D.C., only to be hired to head San Francisco State's black studies department, was a leader in the student-faculty strike.

Hayakawa, who took over as acting president on Smith's departure, fired Hare. And Hare boasted publicly that, fired or not, he would run the black studies department during the next school year.

HE IS ATTEMPTING to make good his boast.

On Oct. 29, Hare held a press conference at which he said he was returning to the campus to run the department "at the request of the students."

The following day, in a memorandum "to all members of the San Francisco State College community," Hawakawa declared that "a reign of terror exists within the black studies department."

"The situation," he wrote, "is that a small clique, organized around revolutionary ideology, is attempting to seize control of the department in order to convert it into an agency for revolutionary propaganda. And they are doing this by intimidating and coercing the black studies faculty and students . . .

"What the black revolutionaries are trying to do is to interpret any attempt to stop their tactics of intimidation and take-over as a black vs. white issue. The real issue is of course the preservation of intellectual integrity in black studies vs. the subversion of the department to propagandaistic ends."

IN A MEMORANDUM the same day, Urban Whitaker, dean of undergraduate studies and acting dean of ethnic studies, put the finger on Hare as the central figure in the attempted takeover. And Whitaker quoted from Black Fire, publication of the BSU, that "each black studies course has a teacher's assistant who has been selected by the (BSU) central committee to politicize the class."

Campus revolutionaries, through their organ, the Daily Gater — which continues to appear as a "student publication" despite being denied student body funds — promptly blasted Hayakawa and Whitaker as "racist" and pooh-poohed the idea of a "reign of terror."

On Nov. 6, Hayakawa attempted to hold a meeting with the black studies staff. Only three showed up. One of them handed over an unsigned letter. Then they left. "All but three were scared away and those three said they were not at liberty to speak," reported the college president.

AT THIS POINT, an organization that had not before played a role in the campus affairs decided to investigate: the Baptist Ministers Union of San Francisco, which includes 150 mininsters of Negro Baptist churches.

On Nov. 18, the ministers reported that Negro militants were indeed conducting a "reign of terror" in the black studies department.

"We are satisfied that the problem of intimidation is very real and demands our urgent action," said Rev. G. L. Bedford, union president.

Rev. Charles Moore charged that young Negroes were being misled by "long-haired white liberals" who promote narcotics and use civil rights as a front for their own aims.

WHY SHOULD BLACK studies be the source of such controversy, intimidation, violence?

The answer perhaps lies in what is meant by "black studies."

To most of us — including those who agreed to institute the department at San Francisco State — it means courses in the history of the Negro peoples, both in this country and in Africa, and in their art, architecture, music and dance in their native lands.

But black studies may mean something altogether different to Nathan Hare and the Black Students Union.

WHAT IT MEANS to them may be indicated by two of the suggestions by another militant black educator, Sidney F. Walton Jr., principal of Martin Luther King School in Sausalito, in his book, "The Black Curriculum" (which, incidentally, all teachers in that school have been directed to read and be ready to discuss by Dec. 1). Under "What You Can Do" in getting a black curriculum, he advocates, among other things:

"Break, violate, change or remove all laws, rules, regulations and ordinances which stand in the way of betterment of the human condition for minority people in America. . .

"Provide black educators and black students with information that will enable them to expose and thus, destroy the racist system."

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

A story keenly relished in Tel-Aviv these days concerns an Israeli bomber pilot who radioed his base commander, "I'm flying over a beautiful new steel mill built for the Egyptians by the Russians on the Upper Nile and I've got three bombs still on board. Shall I blow up the mill?" The commander answered, "Have you lost your mind? Leave that mill alone. Mismanaging it will cost those Egyptians a minimum of 10 million dollars a year!"

Smog District Does Control Emissions

I would like to take this opportunity to comment on your editorial entitled: "What's This? Smog Board Against Free Enterprise?" which appeared in the Nov. 13 issue. You state that the district "now has a suit in court to try to force the district to open its books to show what industries are emitting how much of what pollutants, and what has been done about it." There is no suit now in court, although attorneys for a citizens group in the South Bay have stated they are planning to institute such a suit.

You state that the district's "little gray eye-ball charts" are inadequate to control air pollution. It should be pointed out that the district's regulations contain emission prohibitions for particulate matter, based on opacity of smoke, grain loading and process weight. In addition, district regulations contain emission prohibitions on sulfur dioxide and sulfur trioxide. There are also emission prohibitions on reactive organic compounds and aldehydes. The so-called "eyeball chart" is only one measure used to check emissions from industrial and commercial operations.

You also state that the district will ban backyard burning effective Jan. 1, "while it fights in court against disclosing what, if anything, it has done about industrial pollution". Again I should point out that the district is not fighting in court, and has disclosed for the past 12 years what it has done about industrial pollution. District regulations have succeeded in preventing from entering the atmosphere 5000 tons per day of pollutants which otherwise would have gone into the air from sources under district jurisdiction. This information is readily available, and has been made available to you. . .

While your editorial took no side on the statements made by the citizens group on "interfering with free enterprise," it may interest you to know that industrial and commercial operations in the Bay Area have spent close to $200 million on control equipment to meet district regulations in the past 12 years. In addition, the district has spent close to $220,000 on air pollution monitoring and measuring equipment in the same period.

People Too Harsh On Vice President

I think people are entirely too harsh with Vice President Agnew. After all he occupies a very critical position in the administration, that of comic relief buffoon. He also fulfills another function, that of life-insurance for Mr. Nixon. For no one, no matter how annoyed they may become with Mr. Nixon, is going to play Lee Harvey Oswald with a clod like Mr. Agnew waiting in the wings.

Careless Writing, Sloppy Investigating

Careless writing and sloppy investigating are both deplorable, in my opinion, whether it be on the part of an editorial writer or the county welfare department.

The purpose of your lead editorial of Nov. 14 certainly defeated itself by the gross misstatement in the third paragraph that a mother with two children could receive $798 per month from the county. Wouldn't $228 be closer to the truth? Or is the I-J trying to lure more mothers with dependent children to come to Marin? There might even be a number of fathers earning $1,200 a month who might take off if they thought their wives and children would be so well taken care of by the county.

Let's try to be a bit more accurate in the future.

(The very careless error of putting "per month" after the $798, which was the amount received since Aug. 1, was corrected the following day. The editorial writer has given himself 20 lashes. — Editor.)

LINES ON LIVING

How To Change Drab Life? First, 'Know Thyself'

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

How does a person change? How does one turn a new leaf to escape the hideous boredom of waking up in a dreamless mood, in yesterday's faded image?

Not by energy and motion alone. A person's energy must be channeled, well thought out, and directed. It requires the wisdom to face reality, to accept change and to have the courage to admit error and benefit by it.

WE ALL KNOW people to whom motion — motion without direction — has assumed a momentum of its own, a meaningless velocity of no real purpose. Why, then are they running? Why will a millionaire kill himself for another million? Why will a young disillusioned person commit suicide when life has to offer him so many other chances for personal enrichment? It is only because they have lost themselves: they have lost the capacity to lose and still recover; they have lost the personal elasticity to submit to change and surrender to other, perhaps richer, alternatives and possibilities.

Such people are terribly afraid, mostly of themselves. They abhor the thought of looking at themselves psychologically, eyeball to eyeball. They fear the emotional and spiritual emptiness they might discover. For when they stop to take stock of their coming and going — their running in all directions — they dismally discover that all their fearsome energy and activity has been to no visible purpose and end — only to cover up for an inner emptiness, to compensate for their emotional unfulfillment, a hollow clash of the dark clouds in their mental horizon.

WHATEVER they possess in personal wealth and worldly attainments, they actually don't have inexperience. They may own an earthly kingdom and fail in having their inward kingdom of heaven. For their toil is only directed toward building the foundation of their own faltering ego. They always appear selfish, lonely and insecure.

They cannot forgive themselves; nor others. A mistake to them is a scandal; a loss is total loss; for they are neither able nor willing to make the necessary adjustments by delving into their inner resources for self-recuperation, compassion and healing. They lack the personality resiliency that will allow them to "make do" with less than what they have been accustomed to; they fail in the comeback that will enable them to tap their hitherto ungiven selves — to save themselves, to fulfill themselves.

Henry King suggests this simple and sound advice for a personal self-acquaintance: "Make it a point to stop and take time to make your own acquaintance. You'll probably get something of a surprise. Because you'll be meeting a very nice and stimulating person — yourself!"

Russians Show Signs Of Thaw In Arms Talks Preliminaries

HELSINKI — This conference of the two nuclear powers, the United States and the Soviet Union, is different from any held since the start of the cold war. This is difficult to appreciate, since the habits of thought of the cold war have created a seemingly impenetrable barrier of suspicion and distruct.

The difference is not in what is being said — up to this point both sides have kept silent — but in what is not being said. A conference opens with no propaganda blast, no scare words — imperialist, communist conspiracy — no reference to Vietnam and the deeply divisive cold war fronts. Thus far no calculated leaks have stirred the old suspicions.

HOPES HAVE so often been dashed in the effort to bring about a relaxation of tensions and at least a limited understanding between the two nuclear giants that prediction at this stage is, to say the least, chancy. Mischief makers, the implacable cold war warriors, would be only too pleased to see the present atmosphere of quiet restraint shattered. It could happen as it has happened before.

In the view of this observer, the present preliminary phase will end with a modest success. The two sides will agree on what to talk about when they meet in January in Vienna.

Then the sparring will begin as the giants confront each other across the nuclear divide. Even the rashest prophet must draw back before that prospect. The misconceptions on each side are so pervasive and deep-seated.

ON THE PERIPHERY you listen to a Russian observer (they are, in fact, all participants, not privileged kibitzers) talk about the military-industrial complex in the United States, the opposition of the Pentagon to any slowdown in the technology of new weapons development. You have, he says, deep social unrest in the United States; you need funds to solve the probelm of your cities, and, therefore, you must spend far less on the arms race.

But what about the Russian military and their influence on policy and disarmament? With due solemnly he observes: our military have always been surordiante to our duly designated officials. And what about the desire of the Russian people for a little more of the good things of life? That is no problem. Everything, so the smiling assurance goes, is under control.

That could be a small sample of the tiresome tune to be repeated once again at Vienna in the new year. If each side takes it for granted that the other needs arms reduction at the cost of almost any concession, nothing will happen. That is a large possibility.

As here in this preliminary phase, the principals will be dealing with the most highly secret information. They will of necessity have to lift the curtain a bit. And if months pass with no sign of progress, the deepening suspicion of a fishing expedition for the information long buried in the super-secret files will grow. That suspicion confirmed could bring an abrupt end to the negotiation and the prospect — the more intolerable for hopes having been crushed — of an arms race to infinity.

IT IS JUST possible that this is the break so long awaited. The Russians show many sings of a thaw. If you want a visa to visit the Soviet Union, simply ask for it. The Soviet ambassador and the American ambassador to Helsinki can join to give a party for the two delegations and the diplomatic corps. That last is a small but hitherto unprecedented example of rapport.

You can hear the old Kremlinologists in Washington snort with contempt. They have been through the diplomatic quadrille before. It means nothing. It is barely possible that this time they are wrong.

Against that slim possibility is the fact that the Nixon administration is turning increasingly to the right and putting in positions of power hard-liners with a determination set against any relaxation of the competition in weapons of total destruction.

Leafing ahead in the book of fate has in the past proved a highly unrewarding exercise. Nevertheless, with a few hopeful straws blowing in the wind from the east, it is a strong temptation.

The FBI's Saddest Inspection: Not A Hippie In A Hundred

WASHINGTON — It is generally known that the FBI had many undercover agents dressed as students and hippies during last week's mobilization march in Washington. What isn't known is the difficulty the FBI had in making their agents look authentic.

On Friday morning 100 FBI undercover men, all wearing war-surplus apparel, dungarees and pnchos, gathered in the Justice Department courtyard to be inspected by J. Edgar Hoover.

They were all lined up at attention when Hoover arrived.

"SLOUCH, DAMMIT!" Hoover yelled at them. "You'll never pass as protesters if you keep your shoulders back and your stomachs in."

Hoover stopped in front of one agent. "Fitzpatrick, what are you doing with your shoes shined?"

"I always keep my shoes shined. It's the first thing I learned in FBI school."

"Well, dirty them up."

"How, sir?"

"Go the Mud Department and have them touch them up. You show up once more with shined shoes and it goes in your record."

THE FBI DIRECTOR continued down the line. "McAlister, what are you doing with an American flag in your buttonhole?"

"I want them to know where I stand, sir."

"They're not supposed to know where you stand. You're an undercover agent. Now give me the flag, and put on this peace button."

"Do I have to, sir?"

"Give it to me and . . . wait a minute, McAlister. Did you take a bath this morning?"

"I took a shower, sir."

HOOVER WAS enraged. "You had specific orders not to bathe for three days."

"That's all right for you to say, sir, but I was beginning to have body odor."

"That was the idea, McAlister. You were supposed to have body odor so you wouldn't be suspect."

"But, sir, cleanliness is next to godliness."

"Very good, McAlister, but in this case I want you to stink. Now go in the gym and work out for three hours in your clothes and then let me see you."

"The men mean well, Mr. Hoover."

"Your hair!"

"Waht's the matter, sir? Isn't it short enough?"

"You have a crew cut. Who told you to have a crew cut?"

"I've always had a crew cut, just as department regulations require."

"Get this man a wig and sideburns."

"Please, sir. Don't make me wear sideburns. My mother would never forgive me."

"Give him 10 demerits," Hoover said as he walked away.

HE STARTED up the second ranked and stopped in front of a man who was wearing a trench coat.

"What are you doing in that trench coat?" Hoover shouted.

"I don't want my dungarees to get dirty, sir."

"Take off that trench coat and start rolling in the yard until your dungarees are filthy," Hoover said.

The next man Hoover stopped in front of was carrying a football banner which read "Love America or Leave it." Hoover grabbed the banner. "No, Holliston. No patriotic banners."

Tears welled in Holliston's eyes. "No one would have seen it."

Hoover stomped out of the courtyard and said to his assistant, "This is too much. You inspect the rest of them. I'm going to the race track."

North Marin Communities Grow Across Landscape

Highway 101 snakes through the growing community of Ignacio, foreground, to the gates of Hamilton Air Force Base (right), to the burgeoning city of Novato sprawling across the hills and fields (top). Prior to World War II, most of the land in photo was undeveloped and used for dairy ranching, orchards or small farms. In 1928 the government decided to establish a bomber base on the West Coast and the next year the area known as Marin Meadows which had been at one time part of a Mexican land grant given to Ignacio Pacheco was selected as the site for Hamilton Field. The runways and buildings were finished in 1935. During the war years of the 1940s Hamilton became a base for thousands of bombers and fighters serving in the Pacific. The Marin Golf and Country Club area across from the field was taken over by the government and turned into Camp San Raphael, a housing development for soldiers on their way to war. After the end of the war when the Air Force became independent of the Army, Hamilton Field became Hamilton Air Force Base. The growth that started with the building of a small airfield almost 24 years ago has never stopped. (Photo by Aerophotographers)

AUTO ENGINE RUNS ON NATURAL GAS, GASOLINE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The General Services Administration yesterday unveiled an automobile engine which operates on natural gas as well as gasoline. Administrator Robert L. Kunzig showed the engine.

The dual fuel engine is the same as that being used in federal government tests in California and it is aimed at eliminating much of the air pollution caused by gasoline engines.

Four sedans and eight trucks at the VA hospital in Santa Monica have been equipped with the engine. It was developed by the three gas companies of the Los Angeles based Pacific Lighting System.

U.S. Held Ignoring Needs Of The Mexican-Americans

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The federal government can always find a Mexican-American when it needs him, but not when the Mexican-American needs help, Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Tex., charged yesterday.

Yarborough brought to a close two days of hearings by a Senate subcommittee into how the federal government helps elderly Mexican-Americans.

"We must explore some questions further and get some reports from the field," Yarborough said before leaving the hearing. "We want to look for any regressive actions, such as in housing and other cutbacks."

Yarborough said the government has done poorly so far for Mexican-American elderly.

"You know, the government is a very efficient agency for Mexican-Americans when it was a draft law, or when it needs a labor supply. but not when Mexican-Americans need its help," Yarborough said.

He suggested to Raymond Carrasco, assistant executive director of the Inter-agency Committee on Mexican-American Affairs, the committee work hard to get information out to Mexican -Americans on the programs available to them. Yarborough spoke particularly of programs in education for GI's.

Carrasco said he thinks the "lack of initiative" to help the elderly Mexican-Americans is more in local governments than with the people themselves.

"Now, we propose solutions rather than just more outlining of the problems," he said. "For example, urban renewal boards should be elected directly—we are for urban renewal, but not urban removal; also, something has to be done to guarantee these people an income."

Murphy, Cranston See Haynsworth Confusion

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—California Sens. George Murphy and Alan Cranston voted differently on Clement Haynsworth yesterday but both agreed there had been distortions in the case.

Murphy, who voted to confirm President Richard M. Nixon's nomination of Haynsworth to the U.S. Supreme Court, said, "There was great confusion between fact and fiction created during this debate."

Cranston, who voted against Haynsworth, said the trouble was rooted with Nixon's staff, which didn't provide the President with a true picture of his nominee.

"I feel no elation over this action," Cranston said. "And I feel sympathetic with President Nixon, whose staff let him down. If his staff in looking into Judge Haynsworth's record had unearthed the facts we discovered in the Senate about the judge, I'm sure President Nixon never would have submitted his name."

The senators' statements were released by their offices in Los Angeles.

California Democratic leaders said the Senate's action had damaged Nixon's prestige and proved he can't play politics with crucial issues.

"It's certainly a black eye for the President," said Stephen Reinhardt, Democratic national committeeman from California. "This will go down in history as one of the most important events of the Nixon administration."

Reinhardt, a Los Angeles attorney. said, "The non-political effect will be very significant, for this will go a long way toward improving the standards of conduct in government generally."

Leon M. Cooper, Southern California Democratic chairman, said in a telephone interview that "the President just has got to recognize he can't play politics with the important issues of the country."

He predicted Nixon now will "take this lemon and try to make "lemonade out of it" by telling the South he tried to place their man on the bench but the Senate let them down.

Republican State Chairman Dennis Carpenter said, "I don't think it's a great big negative" but "obviously the President wanted this very much" and "I suppose anytime the President asks for something he doesn't get, somebody's going to say 'ha-ha'."

Murphy said it was "unfortunate that the American people have been denied the services of Judge Haynsworth because of the appearance of impropriety."

Cranston said "the great significance" of the action is that the Senate established its "independence of the executive branch and its determination to be equal with the President in determining such great matters as who shall sit on the Supreme Court."

Frederick Hawkins, president of the San Francisco Bar Association, said, "It didn't come as a surprise to me. The newspapers have been accurately showing that the voting was going against him."

Rabies Shots For Family Of Eight

A rural Petaluma family of eight is in the midst of the painful series of anti-rabies shots after being in contact with a pet raccoon that died from rabies.

The family, which includes six children, were unaware of the raccoon's disease until its death and tests by the Sonoma County Health Department. Four members of the family were bitten by the animal around Nov. 1. Their identity was withheld by the department for fear of damaging the family's livelihood.

A health department representative said the raccoon showed none of the typical symptoms of rabies and that the family had no way of knowing they were in danger until laboratory tests were completed. It is thought the raccoon had been bitten by a rabid skunk.

All animals at the ranch have also been inoculated and quarantined.

Adviser Attacks Surtax In Crisis

PRINCETON, N. J. (UPI) — Herbert C. Stein, a member of President Richard M. Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers, suggested yesterday that the net effect of enactment of the 10 per cent income surtax last year may have aggravated inflation.

In a speech prepared for the Tax Institute of America, Stein said the combination of the surtax with easier money policies of the Federal Reserve led to greater inflation.

"The final analysis of the 1968 episode may yet reveal that the net effect of the surcharge was inflationary," Stein said.

"Evidently the enactment of the surcharge helped to convince the Federal Reserve that mid-1968 was a good time for monetary expansion.

"The inflationary effect of this outweighed whatever anti-inflationary effect the surcharge had," he said. "A similar consideration is relevant to the decision to continue the surcharge for the second half of calendar 1969 and the first half of 1970."

The Federal Reserve Board, which controls the nation's money supply, adopted policies of expansion after the surtax was enacted last year to avoid economic "overkill" and a recession.

However, when inflation continued unchecked, the Federal Reserve shifted to a tight money policy early this year which it still maintains.

Stein said when the income surtax expires there is a "danger" that the Federal Reserve will overcompensate for the fiscal change.

"We should be able to find a more efficient way of reaching a desirable monetary policy than by using massive tax changes as signals," Stein said.

The 10 per cent surtax is presently scheduled to expire Dec. 31. The Nixon administration has requested extension of the tax at a reduced rate of 5 per cent for the first six months of next year. That bill has been passed by the House and is pending in the Senate.

Administration spokesmen have said extension of the tax is vital to the campaign against inflation.

Bolinas-Stinson Board Contracts Architect

Bolinas-Stinson School District trustees have signed a contract with architect Richard Borgstrom to prepare preliminary and precise plans for the new Bolinas-Stinson school to be located on the present Bolinas School site.

The contract, authorized by trustees Thursday night, provides that Borgstrom will be paid $7.50 an hour up to a maximum of $1,800 for the work, according to Supt. Clarence B. Larison.

Apparel Firms Ask Nixon For Price And Wage Binders

NEW YORK (UPI) — The heads of five of the nation's largest apparel manufacturing firms Thursday called on President Richard M. Nixon to institute price and wage controls at once.

The five are Michael Daroff of Botany Industries, Inc., Richard Schwartz of Jonathan Logan, Inc., Alfred O. Slaner of Kayser-Rosth Corp., Lawrence S. Phillips of Phillips-Van Heusen Corp. and Franklin M. Jarman of Genesco, Inc.

The apparel industry generally is considered to be caught in a growing price squeeze.

The five chief executives said in a joint statement — "it has become increasingly apparent that the administration's position permitting industry and labor to adopt their own wage and price controls has had little effect as a check against spiralling inflation."

They added "We experience frustration and sadness as we watch our employes and all other consumers lose whatever wage increases they have enjoyed in the past few years to inflation. No American has been exempt from this terrible erosion."

They said they have reluctantly decided to ask for formal implementing of wage and price controls because "unless some action is taken immediately, a monetary and social situation rivaling that of depression is inevitable."

Tremor Control By Man-Made Quakes Offered

BERKELEY (UPI)—Natural earthquakes may someday be controlled by man-made ones, according to a federal expert.

Dr. L. C. Pakiser, chief of the Office of Earthquake Research and Crustal Studies at Menlo Park, yesterday told a science writers seminar that a pair of recent Nevada nuclear tests provided "the first unplanned earthquake control experiment."

He said a 1.1 kiloton underground test at Benham in the Nevada Test Site triggered 10,000 aftershocks over a nine-mile area during a four-week period of 1968.

A similar test at nearby Joram a few months later also caused earth tremors—but not in the area of the Benham aftershocks.

Pakiser envisioned a day when man-made earth tremors caused by nuclear tests or other means may release "the energy stored in quiet stress areas—energy which otherwise would be dislodged in a great earthquake."

British To Ban Drugs In Meat Industries

LONDON EXPRESS

London farmers will be forbidden to stimulate the growth of livestock with drugs used for the treatment of disease in people.

A ban on the use of penicillin and other antibiotics now permitted for routine mixing with feed stuffs is to be imposed by the government following a report that they could indirectly become killers.

Cledwyn Hughes, minister of agriculture said discussions would start immediately with manufacturers of drugs and feeding stuffs about the use of harmless alternatives.

Hughes said he was concerned to learn from the report of a committee headed by Prof. Michael Swann of Edinburgh University that the indiscriminate use of antibiotics might result in the development of organisms transmissible to man which would be resistant to treatment.

The committee reported that antibiotics could be useless for treating people suffering from food poisoning after eating meat from animals which had been treated with the same drugs.

Said Col. Uvedale Corbett, chairman of the British Poultry Federation: "The implementation of the recommendations will make British poultry meat the best and safest in the world. We only hope that imported poultry products will be forced to conform to the same high standards."

Novatans Seek Traffic Safety

Answers to problems of pedestrian and auto safety in San Marin will be sought by the Novato City Council when it meets at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the community house.

Residents have asked for a crosswalk for school children on San Marin Drive at San Carlos Way and for installation of a four-way stop sign or stoplight at the same intersection. A stop sign also is sought on San Carlos Way at either Estrella Way or Isabella Court to slow traffic.

The council wrestled with the problems last Tuesday and asked for further study by the public works department and recommendations from the city's traffic safety committee.

The question of feasibility of a walkway along Center Road from Wilson Avenue to Lu Sutton School will also come before the council.

Other items to be considered include a policy on conflict of interest and formation of an underground utility district on Grant Avenue from Highway 101 to Seventh Street.

Two Hospitalized As Autos Collide

A Tiburon woman and a Sausalito man have been injured when their cars collided on Highway 101 in central Marin, the California Highway Patrol reported today.

Helga Christa Pfeiffer, 24, of 4 Heathcliff Drive, was treated at Marin General Hospital for multiple scrapes and James Eugene Brogan, 46, of Waldo Point, was treated for a cut lip.

The patrol said the mishap occurred at 8:02 p.m. Thursday, when the Pfeiffer car swerved into the path of Brogan's car.

Where The Pilgrim Legend All Began

See Page M2

The Separatists Of Lincolnshire

They Were To Become America's Pilgrim Fathers

By DON KEOWN

The average American is, to an appalling degree, ill-informed about the Pilgrim Fathers, according to one of Marin's newest residents, Charles H. Salt.

He credits them with the first Thanksgiving, remembers that they landed from the Mayflower on Plymouth Rock to establish one of the earliest English-speaking settlements on the new continent, and pictures them vaguely as some kind of austere, humorless people who dressed in black and practiced their religion strictly and sternly.

For Salt, this is a most incomplete and unsatisfactory summary.

HIS SPECIAL interest in these Englishmen who braved an unfriendly ocean and an uncertain landfall in quest of a new freedom is a natural one.

For Salt, until very recently, was himself a resident of Lincolnshire County, England, from whence came some of the brave men and women who sailed on board the Mayflower — and where the story really began.

For 26 years Salt made his home in Skegness near Boston, the Lincolnshire port city that played a historic role in the Pilgrim saga, where he is the owner and was the proprietor of a resort hotel.

NOW SALT has retired, turning his hotel over to the direction of a trusted general manager, and with his wife, May, has come to the United States to make their home. At 59 Chula Vista Drive, San Rafael, they are occupying the comfortable new home turned over to them by their son, Haddon Salt, the fish-and-chips magnate, when he moved to Louisville, Ky., in his new capacity as an executive with Kentucky Fried Chicken with which his own chain has been merged.

The senior Salt was active in Lincolnshire in the Boston Historical Society, an organization engaged in preserving the rich history of that region.

And, he says, he has always taken a special interest in America and American history, "probably because of the close ties that exist between the United States and Lincolnshire."

THOSE TIES preceded the arrival of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock, beginning with the key role of Capt. John Smith — "who was born in 1579 at Willoughby just six miles from Skegness" — in the settlement of Virginia.

"THE STRENGTH of character that caused the Lincolnshire men to undertake these difficult and dangerous missions was the result of a blending of the qualities of the different peoples who had at various times invaded and settled in this part of England," says Salt.

Still-to-be-found remains of early first century Roman settlements are evidence of the first such invasion. The Romans were followed by the Anglo Saxons. And then, during the 7th Century, Lincolnshire was the center of a Danish invasion.

The Danes stayed in Lincolnshire, intermarried with the Saxons and left a marked imprint upon the character of Lincolnshire men. Towns and villages still bear Danish names.

"FOR INSTANCE," says Salt, "my hometown of Skegness is named after a Danish warrior called 'Skeggy' in Norwegian meaning 'bearded man,' and 'ness,' the Norwegian for 'head land'."

From 1200 to 1400 Lincolnshire enjoyed great prosperity, with Boston generally regarded as England's leading port. "In 1279 and 1289, Boston paid one-third more custom duties than did London. In 1369, Boston became the staple town for wool. Lincoln, the capital city of Lincolnshire, very nearly became the capital of England as well."

Great power was then wielded in Boston, according to Salt, by 30 merchant guilds, each with its own offices, churches and deans. One of their projects was the guild-built church known as the Boston Stump, largest parish church in England, 288 feet long, 100 feet wide, 272 feet to top of tower.

THERE WAS no seating in the huge church. Instead, within the edifice were a number of decorated guild chapels where separate worship services were held by the different groups.

Throughout Lincolnshire the guilds built other beautiful churches. For their upkeep, heavy tithes were assessed against the farmers and merchants. And from this burden stemmed growing resentment of the guilds, the church and the medieval religion. The yoke began to chafe.

Before the way could be cleared for English exploration and settlement of the new continent, the competition of the Spanish had to be dealt with first.

THE DEFEAT of the Spanish Armada in 1588, the destruction of another vast fleet in the harbor of Cadiz a few years later and the frequent capture of overladen treasure ships by British men-of-war and buccaneers all sapped the strength of Spain and halted the spread of its American influence northward.

The seas were thus opened for the transport of English settlers to the eastern coast of the new continent, and it was John Smith of the now impoverished Lincolnshire who took the lead in 1606 in the formation of the Virginia Co. that sponsored a party of 105 planters who left London in December of that year in three small ships. By June of 1607, only 35 of those first colonists survived.

In 1614, Smith, with two ships and 44 men, again set sail for America, but this time his destination was farther north. When he returned after a summer spent off New England's shores, it was with furs, salted fish and, most important, maps of the American eastern coastline.

SMITH HAD named what is now Cape Cod for Princess Tragbizanda, but Prince Charles — "who, by the way," says Salt, "was given the title of prince in Lincoln Cathedral" — changed that name to Cape Anne. Another attempt was made to call it Cape James after the ruling monarch, but ultimately fishermen won the day and Cape Cod it became.

In northern Lincolnshire a number of prominent men who had studied at Cambridge University were at odds with the dominant Roman Catholic religion.

It was some 60 of these "Separatists," including women and children, who, according to Salt, began in 1607 the Pilgrim story when they fled from Scrooby near Gainsborough to make a tedious 60-mile trek across the fens of Lincolnshire to Boston in hopes of obtaining transport there that would carry them out of the reach of the church that was persecuting them. Instead, they were betrayed by a Dutch ship captain and imprisoned in the Guildhall cells of Boston, "which," says Salt, "are still preserved and can be entered by visitors today."

AFTER SIX months of imprisonment and the payment of fines before winning their release, the disheartened Separatists returned to the Scrooby area. But spirits rose again. Another attempt to flee England was plotted, and this time a successful departure for Holland was made in the spring of 1608 by boat from Immingham, 50 miles north of Boston.

In Holland, the new arrivals found the Dutch churches clear of the influence of Catholicism. Even the stain glass windows had been removed, and the chancels were as bare as a backyard. Although worshippers wore black, the "promised land" itself proved more like Vanity Fair than what the serious-minded Pilgrims had expected.

These English expatriates formed their own church at Leyden and referred to themselves as "members of the Christian Reformed Church."

WORD REACHED them there of John Smith's Virginia enterprises and of the maps he had drawn of the coastline to the north.

Worried that their children were being assimilated into the Dutch culture and forgetting their English heritage, the Pilgrims planned another, longer voyage. They purchased the Mayflower — "an excellent ship of 180 tons" — and a second vessel, the Speedwell.

Twice in 1620 there were abortive sailings around England's southernmost tip, Land's End. And twice conditions forced the Pilgrims to abandon the project temporarily and regain the protection of Plymouth's harbor.

EVENTUALLY, the Mayflower had to go it alone, carrying as many passengers as she could hold.

A voyage that began well became something else when heavy gales of a terrifying velocity were encountered. Nevertheless, on Nov. 11, 1620, this persistent and courageous exodus reached and sighted Cape Cod.

And a year later, the first Thanksgiving was observed.

Ironically, on board the Mayflower there were few of the Separatists whose original exodus from Scrooby had begun the movement that was to end with the landing on Plymouth. But two Lincolnshire men, William Bradford and William Brewster, were included. The years, circumstances and the limited transport had taken their toll.

THERE WAS a nucleus from the Leyden congregation, supplemented by "strangers" of a mixed background who made the voyage for various reasons. One of the latter was named Miles Standish.

But by the year 1640 more than 20,000 English men and women had left their island home for America. And among them were many highly educated and devoutly religious persons from Boston and other Lincolnshire towns. Hence the name, Boston, Mass., given one of the early settlements.

"Five Boston, England, men became governors of Massachusetts," relates Charles H. Salt. And he lists them as Richard Bellingham, Thomas Dudley, Simon Bradstreet, John Leverett and Francis Bernard, some of them family names still prominent in New England affairs.

Ironically, when political ties between the colonies and Mother England finally were severed, the opening shots were fired in New England where those links were historically the strongest. A monument a few hundred yards from the bridge at Lexington marks the spot where two unknown British soldiers died, the first to fall. They were members of the Tenth Foot — "the Lincolnshire" — Regiment.

But, says Charles H. Salt, if the Revolutionary War ended the direct political affiliation of England and America, it by no means terminated the close and special relationship between the two. And in Lincolnshire, where "the legend of the Pilgrim Fathers" all began, that relationship

"What Suggestions Have You For Garment Care?"

Your common sense probably made you aware of these reminders, as we'll term them. Be certain —

1. To brush garments and other fabrics frequently. Dust, dirt and grime have almost invisible cutting edges which chaff fabrics if they remain in them.

2. Do not wear the same garment day after day. Alternating garments you wear gives the fabric a chance to free itself of wrinkles and to return to the shape tailored into the garment.

3. Clean garments before storing them. Stains set with age, making them difficult or impossible to remove. Soil attracts moths and other insects.

4. Be careful with cologne or perfume. Do not let them contact fabrics. The alcohol in cologne can affect the dye in a garment and the oil cologne contains can cause brown or yellow stains.

CONSEQUENTLY, next year, Lincolnshire will be celebrating the 350th anniversary of the historic occurrences of 1620 with a series of special events which it expects will attract thousands of history-minded Americans. The Boston Stump, the Lincoln Cathedral, the Boston Guildhall and other historic spots will be the sites for these events.

Salt, who describes Lincolnshire terrain as "very flat land" and the county as "dependent almost totally upon farming now, with some tourism," expects to be back in the older Boston for the celebrations. He is proud that the county was also home to the likes of Alfred Lord Tennyson and Sir Isaac Newton.

But as his permanent home he now regards America and Marin.

"WE LOVE it here," he says. "We like everything about America, and especially the people."

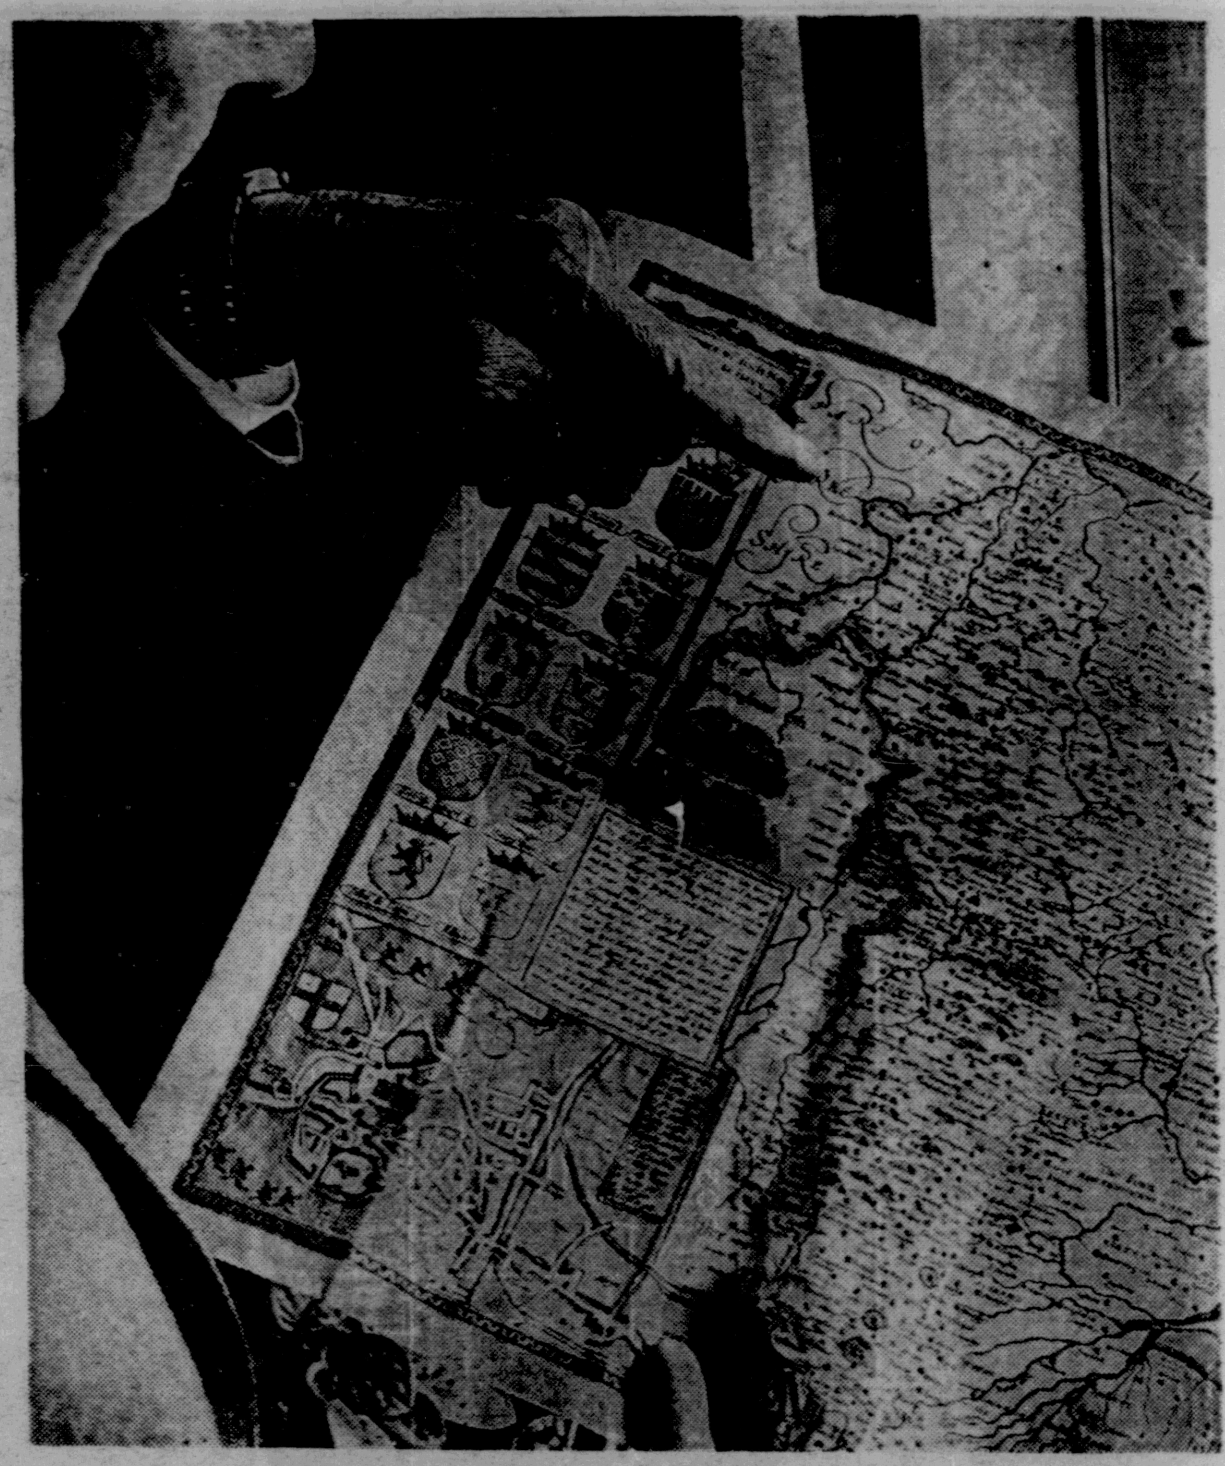
Prior to their move to Marin, the Salts made frequent trips from England to this country to visit their only son. Still, they have yet to visit Cape Cod where the Pilgrim Fathers made history. This oversight they will correct this fall.

The Salts will be spending this Thanksgiving Day in Louisville as guests of their son. And from there, they will go on to Cape Cod to meet a touring party from Boston, England, and join them in taking in the New England sights associated with the Pilgrim Fathers.

This, says Salt, will be his fourth Thanksgiving in America, thanks to his earlier trips to this country.

AND, HE ADDS with a smile, he expects to dine on turkey and trimmings — "not fish and chips."

Salt is eager for even closer associations between Americans and English. "We have so much in common," he says, "it almost seems that England should be a 51st state."



CHARLES H. SALT points on a map to the northern border sector of Lincolnshire County where a group of Separatists, rebelling against the medieval church, began a movement that culminated years and hardships later with the settlement of Cape Cod in America. Each of the heavy dots on the map represents the location of a church.

And he sees an appreciation of early historical links as one of the most effective ways of cementing that special relationship.

"That's why I think it is so wonderful that these Lincolnshire friends of ours are coming to Cape Cod," he says. "And why I think it is so important that Americans visit Lincolnshire next year and participate in the programs that have been arranged for them."

THE VERY staging of these events, he believes, will bring home to their English sponsors a keener realization of the roles their forefathers — "up until now, they have been largely regarded as the bad boys, for they were the non-conformists of their time" — have played in world history.

Both Englishmen and Americans can profit, Salt believes, from a greater appreciation of the forces that were set in motion when a small group of devout and educated Lincolnshire men and women decided more than three and a half centuries ago that somehow, somewhere they must find a place where they could worship freely in a manner of their own choosing.

Where Pilgrim Story Started

In County Of Lincolnshire

The most authoritative and comprehensive account of who the Pilgrim Fathers were and what they did, and the events that led up to this, is to be found, Salt believes, in a booklet entitled "Lincolnshire Links with the USA" by Canon A. M. Cook.

UNFORTUNATELY, that book is now out of print and difficult to come by.

Salt, however, has taken the lead in a movement to have a new edition printed and has made a financial contribution toward that end.

It was written, Canon Cook stated, for Lincolnshire people "as a sort of introductory handbook to the story of what their forefathers did for the foundation of the United States; they ought to know more about it than they do."

But Cook expressed the hope that "it may perhaps also be of interest to Americans coming to visit the county."

ITS INTRODUCTION asserts that "the early English settlements of America" were "largely a story of Lincolnshire men, men of whom our county can be justly proud, but about whom many in Lincolnshire today are all too ignorant."

There is added the hope that the book "will bring enjoyment and knowledge to many on both sides of the Atlantic" and "strengthen the links between Lincolnshire and America."

A most worthy goal to which Charles H. Salt also has dedicated himself.

TEA, ENGLISH-STYLE, is poured by Mrs. May Salt for her husband, Charles H., left, and for their son, Haddon. The scene is the patio of the home in San Rafael built by the son, the highly successful fish-and-chips magnate, now residing in Louisville, Ky., and now occupied by the senior Salts.

The WAFs At Hamilton Base Hospital

Three Young Women Are Typical Of Thousands

By LOIS JANE CLEVELAND

Airman First Class Anita Adams sits behind a reception desk.

From across the small waiting room she feels the stare of big brown, or blue, or sometimes green eyes — eyes full of anxiety. Some anxiety is always present in most young children who must visit the doctor. The innocent eyes dart from Anita's pretty face to the huge candy jar placed in front of her. Then they are suddenly attracted to the assortment of colorful fiberglass bugs which climb up a twig affixed to the wall, delightful products of Airman Adam's creative imagination.

IN A SMALL cubicle, a room downstairs from the children's clinic, Sgt. Heidi Hilliard discusses heart fluctuations with a patient.

Heidi, a redhead, has cool blue eyes, which match her disposition. Her petite and youthful appearance hardly seems, to a worried patient, to be representative of the only EKG technician in the hospital. However, her thoroughly professional approach, along with her fresh, All-American beauty, put him at ease. He relaxes on the examination table, while the competent sergeant hooks the portable EKG machine firmly to his chest . . . a machine, which will, in most cases, quickly identify his particular cardiac problem.

Only 21-years-old, Sergeant Pierce is in charge of two civilian and three Air Force hospital technicians on her ward. She affectionately refers to them as "the troops."

THESE THREE persevering women and thousands of others like them are members of the United States Womens Air Force. At Hamilton Air Force Base, in the 78th U.S.A.F. Hospital they see life, death, illness, anxiety combatted, and health restored. And it is all in a day's work.

Seated, momentarily, behind her gigantic handmade paper flowers, Airman Adams says, "This is a busy place. I'm the only one dealing with incoming patients here in the children's clinic. There are two doctors on staff here, and as we're so busy, I find I must keep the children occupied while they wait."

A quick glance around reveals some of the most graphic and appealing works of art.

"THESE CRAYON masterpieces are all done by the children. I think it keeps their minds off their worries before seeing the doctor. It makes the waiting room much brighter, more cheerful, don't you think?"

It certainly does, and even more cheerful is Anita's smile. She has a natural ability to relax the small fry, all members of Air Force families, who would certainly rather be anywhere but in a clinic.

Airman Adams works at 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily shift, and goes to her barrack quite tired. Behind her desk, on the wall, is a picture from a well-known magazine. It's a little boy strangling his cat. The cat's eyes are hopelessly crossed and his misery is most apparent.

"THAT'S HOW I feel some days . . . like the cat," says the WAF. "But, generally, I really love this work. And this on-the-job training prepares me for a career in medicine, whether I choose to stay in the military or not."

Adams like Hilliard and Pierce, works in her on-the-job training using Air Force books for study which is done on her own time. Anita hopes to return to San Francisco State College to work for her Registered Nurse degree. She is now in a Level 3 job.

"If I can go to nursing school, in conjunction with a new program which has just been established by the U.S. government, I will receive credit for the one year of actual work in the medical field that I am now doing."

IF SHE CAN get all basic courses out of the way, she may then apply for the Nursing Vocational Board exam. If she should pass this, she would then go on to college at the University of California in Santa Cruz. That is her dream.

Whatever a girl's dream, the

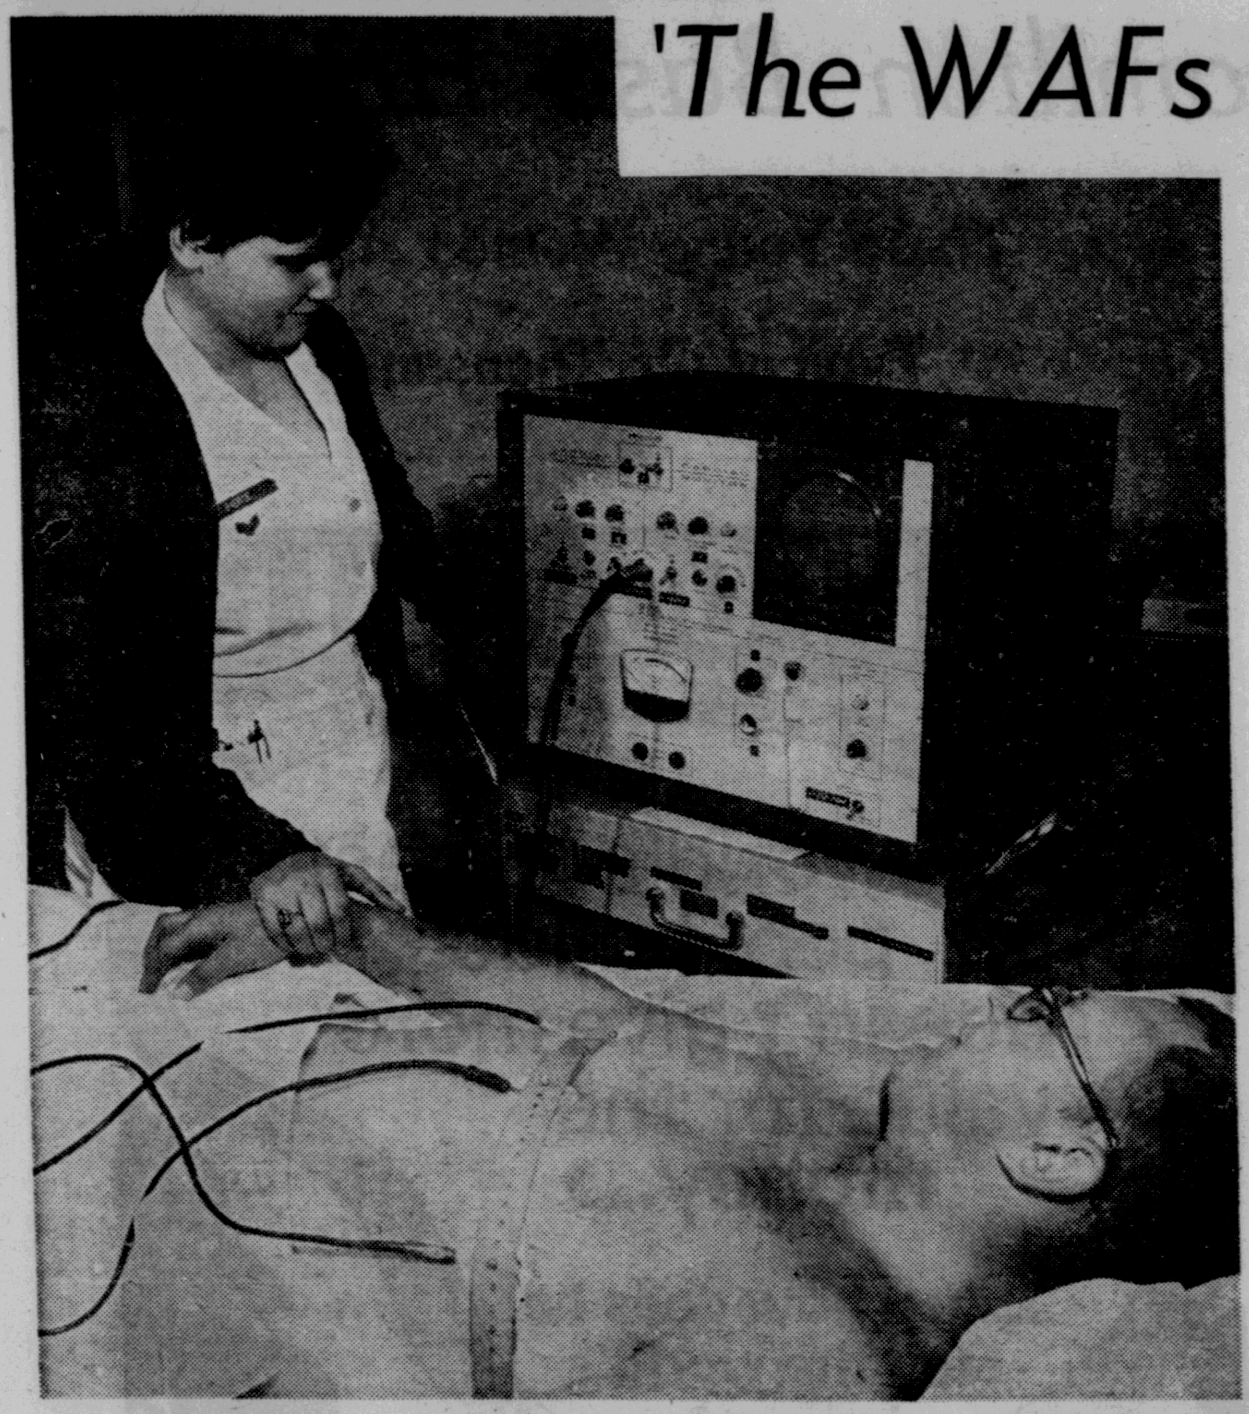
'The WAFs Are The Greatest'

Airmen Pay Tribute To The Girls In Uniform



WHILE only 21-year-old, Sgt. Sharon Pierce is responsible for all technicians' work done in her ward at the Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital. Here the young WAF jokes with and cheers a patient of the ward as she monitors his heart beat. "The WAFs," says the sergeant, "offer the finest medical background training a person could receive." She received much of her instruction in medicine and hospital practices at Lackland Air Force Base in Texas. (Photo by D. Dzilielewski)

WAFs offer a scope of more than 250 types of jobs: finance, education, communications, administration, supply or medicine, with pay and prestige equal to that of the men. A girl may work in any of the 50 states or a number of foreign countries.

But these girls are happy right at present working within the gates of Hamilton Base, with its Spanish style architecture.

Built in 1934, as a result of a bill signed into law by President Herbert Hoover, the field at Marin Meadows was named in honor of Lt. Lloyd Andrews Hamilton, a World War I fighter pilot. The hospital itself is now in its 25th year.

PROUD OF the staff, Chief Nurse Col. Madeline McGinnis says of the WAFs:

"In each section and ward, WAF medical technicians are trained to handle the work done in every situation from EKG to pediatrics. While in training, some do sanitation and cleaning duties, and they work up until they attain the skills and knowledge with which they may specialize.

"For instance, a popular field is surgical assistance. There are 40,000 registered surgical technicians in the medical services of the U.S."

"EACH WAF must go through job levels 3, 5, 7 and 9. As levels go up, usually so do ranks. And they must have one year's experience before they may go into a highly favored field, that of Aeromed Evacuation."

This is a coveted job and it's satisfying in that it is an independent duty type of work. "After all, every WAF wants to fly," adds the Colonel.

"I fly," jokes Heidi Hilliard. "I fly around this place doing three different jobs at once."

Heidi, besides being a heart rhythm EKG technician, works with the patients who are admitted to the emergency room for other reasons. And she also deals with people who come into the regular waiting room for medical attention. All three of these young women admit the hospital is short handed.

"All medical facilities nationwide and, I guess, even overseas have this same problem. But I came into this field expecting it. Nonetheless I want to do my best for these patients." And at Hamilton, Sergeant Pierce is doing just that.

SHE RECALLS her very first exposure to an honest-to-goodness patient.

"I was giving a bed bath to a very elderly lady, crippled with arthritis. The poor thing couldn't move at all by herself so when I moved her for the bath, all of her bones crackeled loudly. I was worried that I was causing her excessive pain.

"She reassured me, 'My 85-year-old bones always crackle that way.' Her attitude calmed me down."

The sergeant continues, "But the real thrill of doing hospital work is when you realize you've helped someone. . .soneone who perhaps came into the hospital deathly ill. Then, one day that same person walks out smiling and well. It is then that you know what you're doing is so very worthwhile."

THE GIRLS agree that "we all grumble and groan sometimes, but then, when we realize that we are dealing with health, or life and death, everything takes on a different light. We are often compared to those on the flight line — people's lives are in our hands."

They also agree that Air Force medical training is excellent. They will be qualified to continue hospital work any time or anywhere. At the moment, all the girls plan to continue in the military.

The girls enjoy their personal lives at Hamilton. The trio is very much alive to the world around them. They are as active and versatile as any three girls can be.

Anita thrills to scuba and sky diving. She has made four static jumps, and is about to become a certified scuba diver. She loves to play tennis and does this during her lunch hour.

HEIDI, A sensitive and creative type, writes prose and poetry and does portraits and character sketches. She's been an art enthusiast since the sixth grade. Her latest thrill is riding around the base in her brand new white Corvette.

Sharon, a serious type, loves to bowl. She is a stereo record collector and has a worthwhile stamp collection. She also boasts of a new car, one half of which is hers and the other half her roommate's. "We decided it's more economical to share the car, as we are quite alike and often do the same things, go the same places."

A question asked all three of the girls was, "Do you feel there is still a stigma attached to women who serve in the armed forces? Are you thought of as unfeminine or perhaps an amazon type of woman?"

BEFORE THEY could answer, a handsome airman who overheard the question, jumped to reply for them;

"The WAFs are just about the most respected, feminine, and well, the greatest girls a guy could meet. These WAFs are 'some kind of girls'."

THE MENDOCINO Art Center, as sketched here by Jack Lucey, Independent-Journal staff artist, is something of a mecca for Marin artists visiting that area. It was started as a non-profit corporation in 1959 by William Zacha, former Marinite. A number of Marin residents serve or have served on its faculty. And other Marinites enroll annually as students. Other Mendocino scenes by artist Lucey are reproduced on Pages M10 and M11.

RUGGED AND PICTURESQUE

Mendocino Area Lures Marin Artists With Scenery Change

Marin's many artists have an abundance of attractive and challenging scenes in their home county to depict with pencil, watercolors, oils or other media.

But they also like to travel to other areas for "a change of scenery."

One of the closest and most popular of these places is Mendocino County with its rugged coastline, forests and picturesque buildings. Scores of Marin artists make frequent pilgrimages to Mendocino, armed with sketch pads, canvas and other paraphernalia.

One of that number is Jack Lucey, commercial artist for the Independent-Journal, who, for a change of pace, likes to do sketches and paintings on weekends and vacations.

Some of his Mendocino County work from this past summer is reproduced on this and the following two pages.

Marin families enjoy the highest average incomes of any county in all 13 Western States.

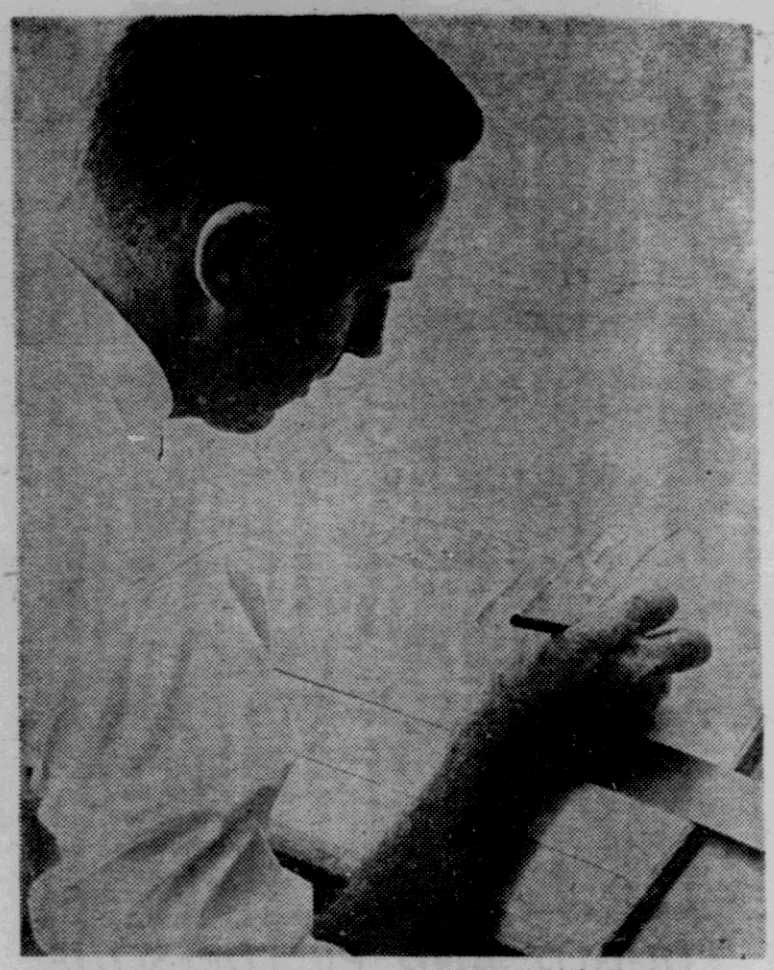
IN MOST SECTIONS of the United States, even the most rural, the windmill, once the sentinel of the plains, has become a thing of the past. But in Mendocino County, they remain a common and picturesque sight. Independent-Journal staff artist Jack Lucey sketched this one during one of his frequent art forays to the Mendocino area.



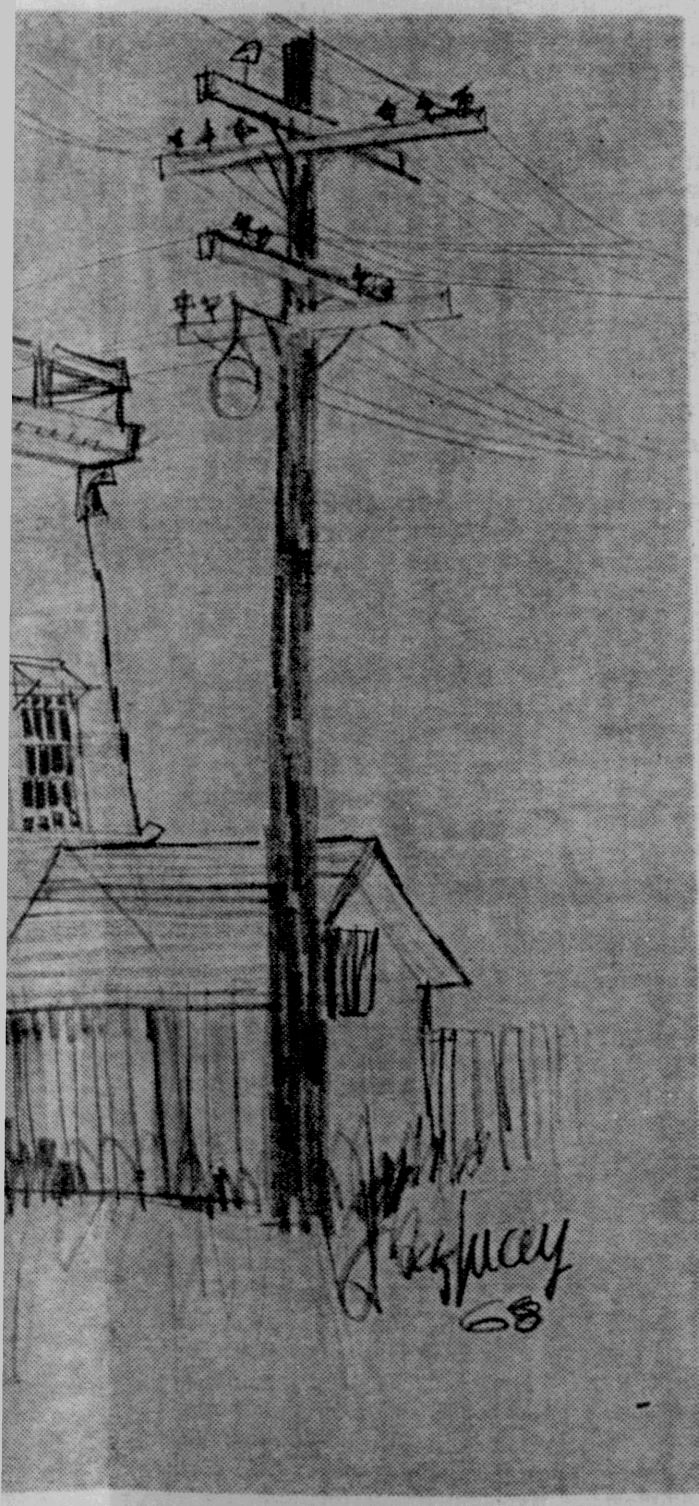
JACK LUCEY is shown at his work as the staff commercial artist for the Independent-Journal. But he also does fine paintings and sketches. And his favorite place for that work is Mendocino County, which he visits with pencils, paint and easel frequently in the summer. Some of his Mendocino scenes are reproduced on these pages.

A Marin Artist

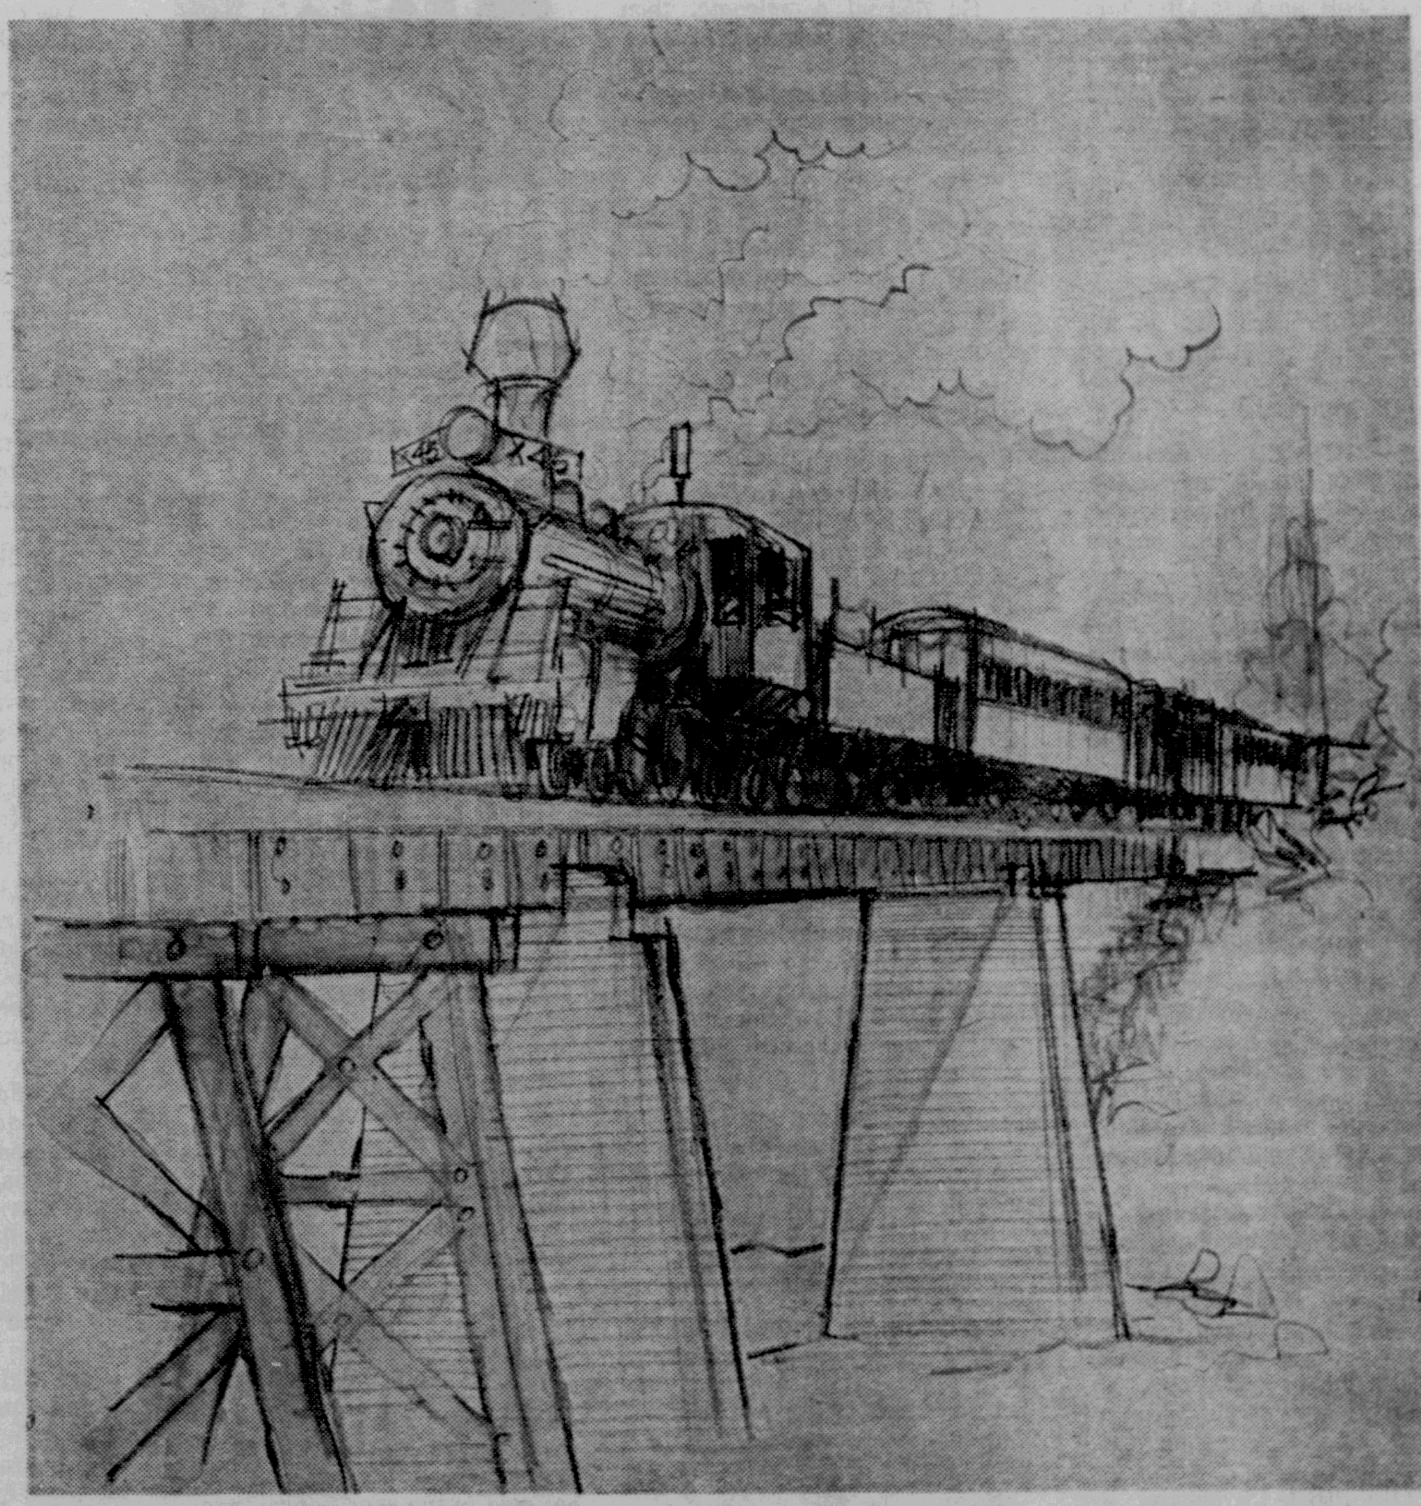
NOT ALL THE scenery that attracts the artists to Mendocino is nature's work. There is picturesque handiwork of man to be painted or sketched as well. This quaint old M tinctive of t Lucey. And of Mendocin

THE RUGGED COASTLINE of Mendocino County offers painters an unequalled opportunity for doing seascapes. This one was painted by Jack Lucey, Independent-Journal staff artist and frequent visitor to the Mendocino country. Lucey worked with E. John Robinson of the Mendocino Art Center this past summer on seascape painting. While Lucey does most of his art work in Mendocino County during the pleasant summer months, it is the winter, he says, that offers the seascape painter the opportunity to catch the pounding surf at its wildest.

rtist Sketches And Paints In Mendocino



quaint old Mendocino residence, with its tower, distinctive of the town, caught the attention of Jack Lucey. And he made it one of his growing collection of Mendocino sketches.



THE HISTORIC OLD "Skunk" train which winds its way between Willits and Fort Bragg through 40 miles of redwoods is a prime attraction, not only for tourists, but also for artists. Like many another pilgrim to the upper redwood country, I-J staff artist Jack Lucey did a sketch of the colorful train during one of his summer weekends in Mendocino County.

AUSTRALIA HAS nearly 200 million sheep or 16 times its human population. Visitors to one of the "Outback" sheep stations or ranches get a close-up view here of the world-famous Merino. Many of the most famous of the stations are within easy one-day-tour range of the capital cities.

THE CITIES OF Australia feature many high-standard restaurants, such as this one, The Summit, in Sydney. It is located in the Australia Square Tower, 550 feet above street level, and revolves, completing a revolution every one and three-quarters hours. The view includes harbor and city.

The Two Different Faces Of Australia

Outback Offers Sheep, Serenity And History

By GREG SHACKLETON

Just half an hour after take-off from busy, sophisticated Sydney we had crossed the historic Blue Mountains and landed in a totally different Australia.

We were now in the realm of the much sung about "jolly jumbuck" of "Waltzing Matilda" fame. That is, the "Outback" sheep country.

There to meet us at Bathurst airport was our host for the day, a tall, sun-tanned sheep rancher in khaki dungarees and broad-brimmed hat.

HE GRINNED, energetically pumped our hands and invited us to climb aboard his station wagon. Soon we were on our way to his ranch.

Leaving the broad streets of prosperous Bathurst, we drove in rolling countryside, white-flecked here with grazing sheep, golden there with ripening wheat. Mimosa bushes, in full yellow-peppered bloom, lined the roadside.

At the rancher's homestead, set in a grove of tall eucalyptus, a pair of snowy lambs dove for cover hehind the wheel spokes of a wagon as we pulled up.

A KELPIE sheep dog, an all-Australian breed, bounded up to greet us and then made off for a nearby herd of sheep. He's a show-off when visitors are around, the rancher explained as we strolled towards the sheep.

The dog was over eager at first, showing off no doubt. But then, obeying his master's whistles and hand signals, he darted to this flank and to that, and soon had the sheep trooping off to the shearing shed pen.

These kelpies will herd a chicken into a tin can, the rancher said.

IN THE SHED the shearer, a big man in navy blue singlet and wool-greasy pants, worked under a bare electric bulb.

He nodded a welcome, then went back to wrestling a sheep into the right position. Expertly holding it still, he burrowed his clippers under the thick fleece, slowly turning the sheep until it was stripped of its wool.

Then grabbing the rolled fleece, he flung it into the air. It unfolded on the way down and sprawled full length on the sorting table. Here it would be classed according to quality and then pressed into a 500-pound bale for auction.

DURING THE drive from the shearing shed to a barbecue on the banks of the Macquarie River we saw animals of other kinds. High in the eucalyptus koalas dozed with their rumps wedged between forked branches, and here and there kangaroos bounded across our tracks. Once a kookaburra bird startled with its loud, raucous "laugh."

As we enjoyed prime lamb chops and tasty steaks, washed down with excellent Australian beer, the rancher told us of days gone by.

Bathurst, he said, was Australia's first inland settlement. It took explorers 25 years to reach this fertile region hidden hehind the wilderness of the Blue Mountains.

THEN ALMOST 120 years ago, gold was struck and fortune seekers of all condition moved in. Hard on their heels came the bushrangers, bandits on horseback who won their gold the easy way.

But to many of the Outback pioneers, the rancher said, the bushrangers were something of heroes. They defied the hated colonial police and rode with great daring.

Much of the gold was won at nearby Hill End, now a ghost town and recently declared an historic site. In the roaring days Hill End had 30,000 people and 52 pubs.

IT WAS CLOSE to here that the largest mass of gold ever found was unearthed, a huge slab of quartz bearing 3,000 ounces of gold.

Our rancher host has set about creating a reminder of those colorful days. On his property he is building a replica of a gold rush town, complete with stores, stables, blacksmith shop and, of course, a pub.

Even in modern, prospering Bathurst traces of the old days remain. The balconies of the older houses still retain wrought iron decorations shipped from England as ballast in colonial times. And running down the center of the broad main street are the old gas lamps, now electrified.

It was a relaxing , intriguing day, with nothing staged or obviously arranged for our benefit. Adjusting that night to Sydney's fast pace and traffic noise took quite an effort.

Sophisticated Cities Feature Fun, Culture

By HARRY E. MERCER

You're on the wrong track if you think of Australia as little more than an outdoorsy place milling with sheep and tennis stars.

There's another Australia. It's a thoroughly sophisticated Australia that for generations has contributed notably to the arts and the sciences.

THE FACTS are little known and therefore come as a surprise to most.

For instance, Australia is the world's most urbanized society and Australians buy more books per capita than any other people.

Australians, moreover, pioneered many of today's international air routes. The major oceans, with the single exception of the North Atlantic, were first flown by Australians.

Again, stainless steel, the rotary aeroplane engine, commercial refrigeration and the technique of producing penicillin were pioneered in Australia.

AUSTRALIAN scientists today are leaders in such sophisticated fields as radio astronomy, electronics, theoretical physics and biochemistry.

It's much the same with the arts.

Australians all are opera stars Joan Sutherland, Marie Collier and June Bronhill; writers Morris West, Patrick White and Alan Moorehead; actress Zoe Caldwell; ballet master Robert Helpman; artists William Dobell, Sidney Nolan, Russell Drysdale and Albert Tucker.

Add to this background of accomplishment the booming pace of contemporary development and Australia has to be one of the most exciting young nations to visit in the world today.

AN EXCELLENT vantage point from which to ponder this urbanity is Sydney's Summit Restaurant, which revolves atop the Australia Square Tower 47 floors above bustling streets.

Between cocktails and coffee your view sweeps 100 miles in all directions, revealing how huge and modern this metropolis of more than two and a half million people really is.

All around are tall, boldly designed skyscrapers. The one you're atop is at present the tallest at 600 feet, but another is under construction nearby that will exceed it by 250 feet.

IN AND AROUND this lively downtown section, incidentally, there are a dozen art galleries and 16 playhouses featuring everything from "Hair" to "Hamlet."

The views of magnificent Sydney Harbor is breathtaking and bound to arrest your attention here is a gleaming white structure of fantastic proportions.

This is the partly completed Opera House, a bold testimony to Australia's involvement with the arts.

THE OPERA House, which the London Observer recently described as "the most important building in the world today," stands solitary on Bennelong Point with blue harbor waters on three sides.

Its roof is a cluster of white canopies rising to 200 feet like wind-filled sails. It compares in area to an 80-story office block occupying an entire city block.

It will house a concert hall with 2,800 seats, and opera theater with 1,500, a drama theater with 600 and a chamber music hall with 450. In addition there will be more than 900 rooms for use by performers, for rehearsals and administrative purposes. The total cost will be close to 100 million dollars.

While celebrated artists around the world express eagerness to perform in future in this great building, many of them have already participated in the Adelaide Festival of Arts, one of the world's significant cultural events.

THIS 22-DAY festival staged every two years, involves some 130 performances of ballet, opera, drama, symphony and jazz concerts, folk singing and a dozen or so major art exhibitions.

Among those featured in the 1970 festival are Sir Laurence Olivier and the National Theater of Great Britain, the Royal Thai Ballet Company of Bangkok, Russian dancer Rudolf Nureyev, the Australian Ballet Company and the Bunraku Puppet Show of Japan.

Special art exhibitions include the famous Pompeii Collection from Italy, the Tate Gallery's Mexican Collection and the works of several internationally acclaimed Australian artists.

American Dr. Norman Philbrick, who produced Shaw's "Saint Joan" for the Adelaide Festival, commented: "It was an amazing and thrilling experience. I have never seen such a variety of offerings nor felt such enthusiasm from a whole community for all the arts."

MELBOURNE, like Sydney, is working away at creating a cultural center that is claiming international attention.

This is the Victorian Arts Center, the first and major section of which, the National Gallery of Victoria, was opened mid-1968. The gallery's art treasures, valued at about 35 million dollars, paintings representing the entire history of Australian art, works by many of the great masters of Europe, classical and modern sculpture and displays of rare Oriental porcelain.

When complete, the seven-and-one-half-acre arts center will also feature a complex of auditoria accommodating an audience total of 4,000, an art school and a 415-foot conical spire housing restaurants, meeting rooms and administrative offices.

ASIDE FROM cultural activities, Australian cities have also come a long way in facilities for the visitor wanting to enjoy himself. Leading hotels feature elaborate floor shows, there are nightclubs galore and countless restaurants offer the favored cuisines of Europe, Asia and the Americas.

This ancient land of the kangaroo and boomerang is swinging, and fast becoming a prime target for tourists.

The Break-Even Point For Hotels

The Mexican Federal Tourist Department, which sets hotel rates in the country, figures that a well-run hotel should break even if it averages 60 per cent of its rooms occupied and should return a reasonable profit with 70 per cent occupancy, according to Agustian Salvat, head of the department.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE MAN IN THE GARDEN by Paule Mason; McKay-Washburn, 151 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

In this, her second novel, Mrs. Mason, Swiss-born but now residing in Beverly Hills, has written a taut, tense tale of terror and suspense.

Heidi, an unsophisticated but not uncomplicated Swiss girl, has been left in charge of the three young children of a London psychiatrist while the parents vacation on the continent. It soon becomes apparent that a madman is menacing the isolated, almost defenseless household. And the fact that the identity of this menace is all too apparent to the reader in no way lessens the interest. Indeed, such knowledge serves to sharpen the suspense.

Mrs. Mason demonstrates her gifts for atmosphere and characterization. If her story has a flaw, it is that her children tend to speak more like adults than like juveniles. But that detracts only a little from a generally excellent novel.

Football's Playboy Quarterback Tells All About His Conquests

By DON KEOWN

I CAN'T WAIT UNTIL TOMORROW . . . 'CAUSE I GET BETTER-LOOKING EVERY DAY by Joe Willie Namath with Dick Schaap; Random House, 279 pages, $6.95.

Arrogance is among the least appealing of human attributes.

Yet, on the athletic field and arena, a certain measure of it in the athlete more often serves to attract than to repell the spectators.

Dizzy Dean had it, and his countrified brand of brashness made him baseball's biggest drawing card during his brief era. Cassius Clay had it, too, and for a time he lifted boxing from its doldrums.

Joe Namath of the New York Jets has it, too. And while he doesn't always wear it well, he stands unchallenged as professional football's most colorful performer and biggest gate attraction. If fans do not turn out or tune in to see him win, they do so in the hope that he might lose — the game and some of his cockiness as well. Just occasionally he does lose a game. But the insolent self-confidence never falters.

It shines through all 279 pages of his book, beginning with the tongue-in-cheek title he and his collaborator, veteran writer Dick Schaap, have chosen — "I Can't Wait Until Tomorrow . . . 'Cause I Get Better Looking Every Day."

Schaap assures us that the braggart and playboy roles Namath adopts with such zest are pretty much a "put-on" — in the manner Cassius Clay used to tease the public. Underneath that flamboyant exterior, says Schaap, is a warm, friendly and honest person of simple tastes, albeit a non-conformist.

The book is about half football and half sex, with Namath seemingly as proud and as candid about his off-season and between-games conquests of the women as he is his exploits on the gridiron. We get frequent glimpses, too, at Namath the imbiber, Namath the gambler, and even Namath the family man, although, of course, in the role of son and brother, not husband. We get the Namath pull-no-punches point-of-view of his overblown confrontation with professional football Commissioner Pete Rozelle over his partnership in a New York restaurant, of the Jets' 1969 Super Bowl upset of the Baltimore Colts, of the "gimpy" legs that have plagued Namath through his career, of his childish feuds with sportswriters. We get some frank comments about coaches and teammates. We are introduced to his merry band of cronies. And we even get a hint that Joe has a girl in mind for future marriage.

All this is told with considerable wit and humor. But is it really Namath wit? Or Schaap wit? Which brings to mind one problem with all such books. How can you separate the contributions and embellishments of the collaborator from those of the subject? How much is the real Namath? And how much has Schaap contributed to the Namath myth already created by other writers before him?

If you will accept the need for books such as this by sports and show business personalities (not the easiest of premises to uphold), then "I Can't Wait Until Tomorrow . . .," be it mostly Namath, or mostly Schaap, is one of the more entertaining. The good humor holds up throughout. There is a great deal of inside "info" — perhaps more about Namath's social life and his feuds with sportswriters than one might wish. And the Namath opinions are often interesting.

For instance, Marinites might find these pithy comments on page 109 hitting home:

"I don't get angry often, but sometimes something just bugs the hell out of me. A few months after the Super Bowl, I saw a story in a Miami newspaper about a coach kicking a boy off the high school baseball team because he had long sideburns. The coach said he didn't want any dirty people on his team. He said athletes are supposed to be cleancut and people with long hair and sideburns are not clean people. I almost called that idiot on the phone. That coach could be ruining a boy's life over something he has no right to judge. If a boy wants to wear sideburns, that's his business. To say that he's not a clean person because he wears sideburns is worse than ridiculous."

THE BOOKS published by Hallmark Cards Inc. are hardly books at all, but really more like expansions of the greeting cards for which the firm is justly famous.

Yet these publications are executed with such taste that it is difficult to reject them out of hand as non-books.

"Robert F. Kennedy: Promises to Keep" ($2.50) is an excellent example. It is a thin selection by Arthur Wortman and Richard Rhodes of the more memorable writings and statements by the late United States senator and presidential aspirant. Its 60 pages cannot possibly compete with larger volumes of biography or quotations, or with Robert Kennedy's own books.

Yet, Wortman and Rhodes have chosen so well, and Hallmark has assembled their selections plus some color portraits so completely and designed so beautifully that the resulting product has a quite unique appeal for Kennedy admirers.

One is reminded again that, great as Robert Kennedy's impact was when he spoke in life, he is even more impressive when his words are reduced to writing. It was not the delivery or style, but the content that stirred the listeners. And no one was more wrong than those who pictured Robert Kennedy as an opportunist capitalizing upon the prestige of his martyred older brother. Listen:

"All great questions must be raised by great voices, and the greatest voice is the voice of the people — speaking out — in prose, or painting, or poetry, or music; speaking out — in homes and halls, streets and farms, courts and cafes —; let that voice speak and the stillness you hear will be the gratitude of mankind."

"Let no man think he fights his battle for others. He fights for himself and so do we all. The golden rule is not sentimentality, but the deepest practical wisdom. For the teaching of our time is that cruelty is contagious and its disease knows no bounds of race or nation."

No one, including JFK, has said these great truths better.

Robert Kennedy admirers will appreciate and treasure Hallmark's simple, restrained but moving little tribute to one of the middle 20th Century's most remarkable men of public affairs.

SUPERIOR Publishing Co. of Seattle has been accused of uncovering photograph collections and whipping up from them books in which the text is only incidental. Such a charge would be less than just in the case of "Alaska Bush Pilots in the Float Country" ($12.95).

Again the project started with an available collection of photos, in this instance the shots that pioneer aviator Lloyd Jarman took in his years of flying in Alaska, first with an old box camera and later with a more sophisticated Kodak. But Archie Satterfield, from the Seattle Times staff, has provided an accompanying narrative that has considerable merit on its own.

With Jarman as his principal source of information, but also incorporating data from other witnesses and records, Satterfield has written an anecdotal type of history that covers Alaskan flying from 1922 when Roy F. Jones became the territory's first commercial pilot — no place on earth needed planes more than did Alaska then, Satterfield asserts — down to 1936 with commercial aviation there pretty well in the control of the permanent airlines that had succeeded the earlier day "lone wolves." There are any number of gaps in the story and the text is by no means a complete or scholarly history, but the book is the repository of a wealth of interesting recollections and yarns.

As for Jarman's pictures, which started it all, although these come largely from negatives more than 30 years old, or from blown-up copies of snapshots, the quality is surprisingly high. The darkroom artistry of Josef Scaylea, also of the Seattle Times, gets the credit for this.

SOME GIFT BOOKS ON SPECIAL TOPICS

By DON KEOWN

Some Christmas gift book suggestions for people with special interests:

For theater buffs, "The Reader's Encyclopedia of World Drama" (Crowell, $15) edited by John Gassner and Edward Quinn is offered as "the first single-volume reference work dealing with drama as literature and covering the art form on all five continents from ritual origins to the present." It fills that bill splendidly. The list of 95 contributors to this hefty 1,030-page volume is most impressive including the foremost scholars, critics and practitioners in the field. From "Abbey Theater" to "Emile Zola" they cover their subjects thoroughly and accurately. Brief essays on the different drama genres, biographical data and critical evaluations of leading dramatists and their work, definitions of stage terminology, historic perspective and much more is to be found in this profusely illustrated book. "The range of dramatic literature that falls into this book's purview is staggering," said the Publisher's Weekly. "Anyone who has the least spark of genuine interest in drama and the theater and its historical development will find the book an invaluable treasure."

"A Treasury of Yiddish Poetry" (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $10) edited by Irving Howe and Eliezer Greenberg is a wide-ranging collection that should be of keen interest to students of this rich ethnic culture. Included are both 19th and 20th Century American writers as well as Yiddish poets from Europe, before, during and after the holocaust, and from Israel. There is a history of the Yiddish language and literature by the erudite editors who see Yiddish poetry as "collapsing the distinctions of history" so as to bridge "the gap between eternity and time." It is a unique book and a major contribution to scholarship in a field that has a special fascination because of Jewish history.

"Your Private World: A Study of Intimate Gardens" (Chronicle Books, $9.95) by Thomas Church is a rich and practical source of ideas for the solution of landscaping problems that most commonly confront Bay Area home owners. With the help of photographs by some of this region's outstanding camera artists, landscape architect Church presents an impressive array of examples of the kind of original and creative thinking for which he has become justly famous. His newspaper and magazine articles have won him a large following. The book medium finds him even more effective, demonstrating as it does with its greater latitude his versatility and ingenuity in projects that range from creating entirely new gardens and remodeling old ones to using fences correctly and shaping swimming pools.

"1,000 Beautiful House Plants and How to Grow Them" (Morrow, $12.95) is by a veteran authority on that subject, Jack Kramer, and constitutes an encyclopedic treatment of the topic. Kramer covers the field completely and arranges his material well, so that it will provide maximum help to the indoor gardener. Along with expert direction on house plant culture, there is a dictionary of 1,000 specimens in alphabetical order. The book is generously and attractively illustrated.

"Vrooom ! !" (Funk & Wagnalls, $8.95) by Peter Manso is for devotees of the exciting, fast-growing sport of grand prix racing. Manso, a Rutgers professor, author and racing buff, has assembled a collection of interviews of the leading drivers in which they discuss candidly the sport, their cars, the lives they live and the deaths they defy. Manso also offers the fans an intimate look into the private likes and dislikes, habits and interests of the racers. Some of the writers covered with conversations and accompanying photos are Dan Gurney, Stirling Moss, Jackie Stewart, John Surtees and Bruce McLaren. Manso has conceived an original idea and executed it deftly to produce an unusual sports book.

"The Writer's World" (McGraw-Hill, $8.95) is compiled and edited by Elizabeth Janeway, and is a direct result of a series of panel discussions sponsored by The Authors Guild Inc. at The New School in New York City in 1965 and 1966 by writers on writing. The voices heard are those of the likes of Robert Graves, Alfred Kazin, Cornelius Ryan, Robert Penn Warren, John Cheever, Louis Auchincloss, Dwight MacDonald, Marianne Moore, William Styron and Susan Sontag. They and the other participating authors also took part in the "unifying" of their material for book purposes. Discussed with considerable vigor and most articulately are subjects such as "Is the Short Story Necessary?" "Is the Old Novel Old-Fashioned?" and "Ways of Looking at History." Hear Wallace Markham on writing the novel: ". . . You need someone who in one fashion or another expresses what the age is all about; and so this is, in essence, the age of the anti-hero. We look in vain for men who as figures, as representations, in the canvas of the novel, can make things happen. We are dealing in the modern novel with men to whom things happen, little men . . ."

In "Painting Abstract Landscapes" or "How to Develop Scenes From Nature" (Sterling, no price listed), professional Paul W. Wood offers a quick, literate and well-illustrated course on this art form after first urging: "Don't let lack of academic training prevent you from entering the fascinating world of creative abstract art." Abstract expression, he says, is the ultimate in simplification, more concerned with the relationship between objects than the objects themselves. The chapters that follow take up not only techniques but specific subjects to be painted such as bridges, trees, rocks and mountains.

"Writing for Newspapers and News Services" (Funk & Wagnalls, $7.95) by Warren J. Brier, the University of Montana journalism dean, and Howard C. Heyn, Associated Press editor, is an effort to deal less academically and more practically with this subject than do existing texts. The emphasis is upon composition — upon good writing in the newspaper sense. Ironically, journalism, which is communication, is a most difficult subject itself to communicate by writing alone. Brier and Heyn have made a valiant attempt, and to a considerable degree have succeeded. At least they have eliminated some of the more wasteful frills and gotten down to basics. Experience remains the all-essential polisher.

It's A Fast Moving Field

"Mobility" is the catchword in business today and directory publishers gray quickly trying to keep up.

The 1969 edition of the "Writer's Market," annual directory of magazine and book publishing firms, shows 233 changes in publishers' addresses and 403 changes in editors. While 89 publications folded, 257 new ones were added to the latest edition of this annual "bible" of freelance writers.

Some Bait For Hollywood From 'Movie Maker' Author

MIAMI GOLDEN BOY by Herbert Kastle; Bernard Geis Associates, 457 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by James Williams.

For those who bothered to read "The Movie Maker," Herbert Kastle has another sizzler out — this time based on Miami Beach's 14-karat gold-jaded coast.

Its locale is the plush Bal Metropole Hotel where all the rich flock for every form of possible entertainment — outside and inside the plush suites. Intrigue abounds mixed with an abundancy of all sorts of sex.

Centered in the plot is Bruce Golden, a public relations hound looking for the right type of girl — one with beauty and lots of coins in the bank. He finds both in Ellie DeWyant, whose father owns the Metropole.

There are several bizarre plots mixed within the rather tedious tome.

I can see it all now, turned into a splashy movie with an M rating. If so, poor Hollywood.

She and cousin Colin, a bonafide intelligence agent, unravel a simplistic spy-catching intrigue with Portuguese, Spanish, British and Russian accents. It's a light tale to be read in a deck-chair before[illegible] during a night of insomnia.

Alan Paton Writes A Love Story

FOR YOU DEPARTED by Alan Paton; Scribner's, 156 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

In passages written for his wife after her death, Paton explores loneliness, examines and reaffirms his religious faith, and assuages his grief with bittersweet recollections of their life together.

The saddest reminiscenses are of their unbelievably innocent courtship in the peaceful South Africa of the mid-1920s. Those were "the halcyon days . . . the sweetest days of life . . . the days that cannot be lived again, except in memory."

When young schoolmaster Paton met Doris Francis, she was six years his senior and married to a dying, passionately loved husband. She admitted her love for Paton shortly after her husband's death — but refused to marry him for three years.

All lovers will sympathize with the joys and torments they shared and endured during a marriage of nearly 40 years.

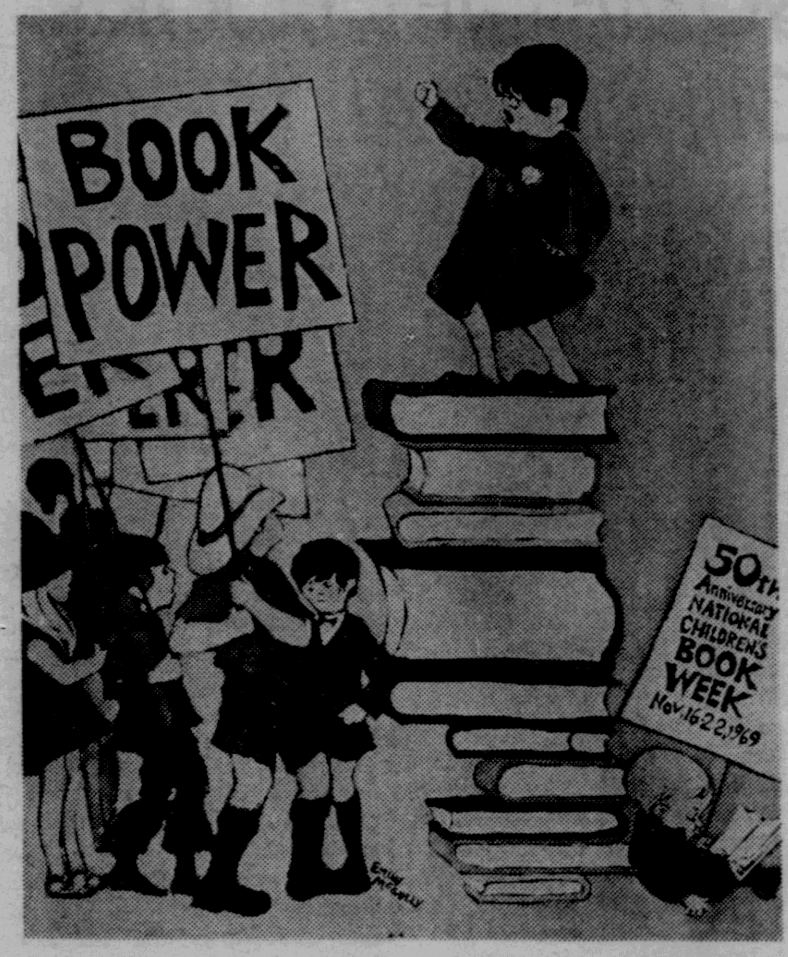
Doris, on her wedding night to Paton, refused to remove her wedding ring from her first husband. Years later, when Paton was appointed warden of a reformatory for African boys, Doris was reluctant to leave her pleasant home; Alan then discussed with her his new and overwhelming love for a beautiful young student. When Paton renounced his young love, Doris removed her first husband's ring and said, "Alan, I will make it all up to you."

Threaded through the love story are episodes revealing Paton's life-long concern for racial equality in South Africa. These political accounts show that Doris shared her husband's compassion and liberalism.

The memoir's passages are arranged in an alternating, counterpoint structure (even numbered passages are about the past, odd numbered about the present) derived from a liturgical chant loved by the Patons. This chant, or "Kontakion", opposes the exquisite pain and pleasure of sorrow and joy and celebrates the joyful triumph of acceptance. "I am full of thanks for life . . . " Paton writes. "This Kontakion for you departed . . . has taught me to accept the joys and vicissitudes of life."

This memoir is an eloquent tribute from a husband to a dearly loved wife, but readers seeking the hauntingly beautiful, cadenced prose of "Cry, the Beloved Country," or "Too Late The Phalarope," will find only echoes of the old poetic Paton. He says, "I had only a jackdaw mind with traces of eagle and owl." Perhaps the agonizing years endured in apartheid-ridden South Africa have weakened the eagle's cry.

Books For The Juniors



A WEEK-LONG observance of National Children's Book Week ends today, with its theme of "Book Power." The National Children's Book Council is the sponsor.

Books for juniors can be both informative and fun, and there are a large number of superior books this fall to support that contention.

For instance, the English sociologist Dr. W. M. S. Russell has produced for the American Museum of Natural History and its Nature & Science Library series "Man, Nature and History" (Doubleday, $6.95).

For the junior high school age boy or girl, it offers a sound and sweeping survey of how man, by different means in different regions, has adapted to or conquered the natural environment to build his culture and historical record. The bad as well as the good results are explored, and the dialogue is on a mature level, yet easily understandable to youth.

The book is generously illustrated with photos, drawings, maps and charts, and color is used effectively.

Two other books from that same series are:

"Fresh Water" (Doubleday, $5.95) by Delwyn Davies, also English, a study of this earth's most precious resource, one that is absolutely essential to our existence. An adviser to the World Health Organization on matter of water supply, Davies' writes learnedly, yet interestingly about water use and water problems. Youngsters, once caught up in the subject, will find it surprisingly fascinating. And again, the color illustrations add zest.

"The Air Around Us" (Doubleday, $5.95) by T. J. Chandler, London geographer, which takes up a subject that should be of prime interest to every Marinite, young and old. It is a discussion in depth of climate, the factors that create it, and what can be done to control it. Man, he warns, needs greater international cooperation and a better understanding of the basics of the atmosphere before attempting to tamper with the weather on any scale. Another splendid book, scientifically sound.

McGraw-Hill's International Library series is a less lavish, less expensive, easier reading series, suited to a slightly lower age group, but nonetheless most worthwhile. It too has issued several new books for the Christmas trade including:

"Nature's Way" (McGraw-Hill, $4.95) by zoologists David Stephen and James D. Lockie, providing an excellent exploration of nature's grand ecological scheme — how all the different threads eventually fit together into one great and complex fabric. The damage that man can do to this great gift, through action or inaction, is also pointed out. This book is outstanding, and like the others in the series, is illustrated profusely, frequently in color.

"The Earth in Action" (McGraw-Hill, $4.95) by science writer and teacher Margaret O. Hyde deals with a subject of special interest in the Bay Area. The causes of earthquakes and volcanoes are explained. And there is up-to-date reporting on what man is doing to learn more about earth movement, perhaps eventually to control or at least to anticipate it. Perhaps the most fascinating portion of the text is that dealing with the earth's beginnings. But it is all written in Mrs. Hyde's distinctive appealing style.

"The World of Tomorrow" (McGraw-Hill, $4.95) by journalist-television producer Kenneth K. Goldstein offers an intriguing look at what life might be like a century from now. Many youngsters will find this the most fascinating book of the series. Goldstein stays clear of science fiction and sticks with probability. But his "forecasts" are nonetheless amazing. A committee of internationally known consultants has worked with the author, thus assuring the book's credibility.

"On Guard: Living Things Defend Themselves" (Doubleday, $4.95) is a book by John S. Bowman detailing how nature has provided its creatures with special defensive and protective devices and habits. Camouflage, spines, stings, secretions, group cooperation — those are just some of the methods discussed. Artist Howard Berelson, making his debut as a nature illustrator, acquits himself well, with colorful, realistic pictures. Young naturalists, 10 and under, will be intrigued.

"Puddles and Ponds" subtitled "Living Things niWatery Places" (World, $4.50) is another specialized nature book worthy of recommendation. Part of the Discovering Nature series, it is the work of writer and science teacher Phyllis S. Busch and photographer Arline Strong. The text, describing the biological and botanical life to be found in standing water, has a poetic ring, yet is informative. The photos, of tadpoles, blue herons, beavers and crayfish, are outstanding. Dr. Busch and Mrs. Strong have collaborated before, and work beautifully together.

"To Steer By the Stars" (Doubleday, $3.95) by Paul Rink is the story of Nathaniel Bowditch, the father of celestial navigation and key figure in American maritime history. Rink, a Monterey County native, tells his story uncommonly well, so that young Marinites, themselves accustomed to close proximity to the sea, should have little trouble identifying with Nathaniel, the boy who overcame hardships and obstacles to make a major contribution to his country and to mankind. It is the biography of a genuine hero who has been largely overlooked by writers.

"Pioneers of Flight" (Hammond, $3.50) is by Henry T. Wallhauser, a New Jersey newspaper man, and details the early progress of aviation, principally through the exploits of the men who were its heroes. The chapters on the World War I era are especially interesting, and adult as well as junior air buffs will enjoy this well-done resume. Wallhauser begins with 1903 — "the pivotal year" — and ends with Charles Lindberg's feat, although there is a look ahead to aviation's future appended to the history. Along with historic photos, there are some excellent color illustrations by Jack Woodson.

"Fathers of America's Freedom" (Hammond, $3.50) by author Donald E. Cooke offers an intimate look at our founding fathers, minus the romanticized myths accepted by so many histories for young readers. The stress is on the "human side" as Cooke describes each of the 56 men who affixed their signatures to the Declaration of Independence. The declaration itself is also part of the text. Portrait artist Harry J. Schaare is responsible for the illustrations.

"Young Scientist and the Doctor" (McGraw-Hill) is part of a Young Scientist series by science consultant George Barr, whose purpose here is to explain to the juniors exactly how the physician functions to protect the well-being of his patients. There are suggested, simple experiments to demonstrate the doctor's techniques. And a considerable number of tips on good health practices, plus physiological lessons. Barr has a long record of successes in writing for young people. And this looks like one of his best yet.

The first two of McGraw-Hill's new The History of Science series are now available. "The Continuing Revolution — a History of Physics from the Greeks to Einstein" is by Joseph Agassi, and uses classic Greek dialogue form to retrace the discoveries and their meaning. "An Adventurer's Guide to Number Theory," by Richard Friedberg, reviews civilized man's fascination with numbers, and the various puzzles propounded and sometimes solved through the centuries. At $5.95 each, the books are not for the idle child, but they certainly epitomize the advantages any youngster enjoys today in getting an education as compared to even 20 years ago.

Industry is rarely a glamorous subject in the eyes of the young who find sports, science, the professions, etc., more appealing and exciting. The late Leonard M. Fanning was one writer who tried to make the subject interesting to juniors, writing a number of books about industrialists and industries. His latest to be completed prior to his death has the advantage of dealing with a topic with which many youngsters do feel considerable empathy — the car. His "Men, Money and Automobiles" (World, $4.50) is a serious treatment that reports the problems along with the progress. While impressed by the latter, Fanning did not underplay the former.

"Success Tips From Young Celebrities" (Grosset and Dunlap, 75 cents) is a Tempo paperback compendium by Dena Reed of advice from successful figures in the entertainment world, ranging from Rick Nelson to Bill Cosby, for young people. Unfortunately, show business is the least typical of all professions. On the other hand, some youngsters seem more likely to listen when the Lennon Sisters stress the necessity for harmony within the family, or Sal Mineo advises the girls that they don't have to be "an easy mark" to be popular, than when such advice is dispensed from proffessions better qualified to offer guidance.

Marion Norris Uhl's use of characters drawn from the heraldry of Great Britain may confuse some American boys and girls at the outset. But once they become accustomed to the likes of the English lion, the Scottish unicorn and the Welsh dragon, they should settle down to enjoy her "The Spiral Horn" (Doubleday, $3.50). Certainly her story for youngsters up to 12 of the bewildered young unicorn William is lively enough. But it may take a child of some imagination to take it all in.

"Stranger in the Hills" (Doubleday, $3.50) is an adventure yarn for juniors in the upper primary grades by Madeleine Polland that gains much of its appeal from its colorful setting, the Scottish coast and highlands. But there is action and suspense, to, in this contemporary tale. Two young girls become involved in helping a deserting Russian sailor make good his escape. Realism is attained without sacrificing excitement.

A GERMAN LEGEND is retold in "There Comes a Time" (Doubleday, $4.95) by Elisabeth Borchers. The Christmas-season book, translated by Babette Deutsch and illustrated in color by Dietlind Blech, tells how three kings of long ago set forth on a journey to a town called Bethlehem, and each of their 12 stopping places bore the names of one of the months of the year. One of Blech's illustrations is reproduced above.

On The Stereo Scene

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Getting great jazz musicians together is no easy job but once it is done it is difficult to pull them apart.

Especially is it so when you have such a lineup as Yank Lawson and Billy Butterfield on trumpet, Bob Haggart on bass, Lou McGarity and Carl Fontana on trombones, Bud Freeman on tenor sax, Bob Wilber on clarinet and soprano sax, Ralph Sutton on piano and Gus Johnson on drums.

This outstanding combo, with the occasional help of Cutty Cutshell and Peanuts Hucko, has been playing together since 1967 and won standing room audiences at a famous New York nightspot late last year.

Enoch Light, the wizard of sound, now is presenting these gentlemen to the record-listening public under the best possible stereo surroundings. Their first recording for Light is called "The World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart" (Project 3 PR-5039SD).

This may not be the world's greatest jazz band but they may justly use the titie until a better combo comes along. The record contains such contemporary favorites as "Love Is Blue," "Wichita Lineman" and "Alfie," but there is some fine nostalgic jazz on Haggart's classic "South Rampart Street Parade."

Here is a jazz session which should have universal appeal because Enoch Light's Total Sound Stereo technique makes the listener forget that it is a recording and not a live session.

Selected Singles — "Chelsea Morning" by Judy Collins (Elektra EK-45657), "Hello Love" by Gene and Francesca (Tetragrammaton T-1534), "Old Time Rock & Roll Music" by The Kids These Days (Smash S-2231), "Sunrise to Sunset" by Five Man Electrical Band (Capitol P-2562), "I've Got an Awful Lot of Losing You to Do" by Mary Lou Collins (Kapp K-2030).

Tape Deck — reel-to-reel; "What's an Uggams?" (Atlantic ALX 8196), an Ampex tape release, presents Leslie Uggams in an enjoyable session which includes two songs from her Broadway musical, "Her First Roman." Eight-track. "Million Seller Hits" by the 101 Strings with Two Pianos (Audio Spectrum-Ampex EO ASX 85102), is a fine cartridge for dinner background music. Includes "Autumn Leaves," "More," "Misirlou," and "Clair de Lune."

8 THINGS TO CONSIDER When Buying A Home

There are many things to think about once you decide to buy your home. Here are eight of the most basic considerations, and suggestions as to how your Realtor can help . . .

1. Prompt Action: Don't postpone your home because of "high prices." You'll find sensible prices in Marin, once you really look. NOW is the time to buy your home — not a year, or two, or five years from now. NOW is the time—before prices go higher—before you lose more precious time in making your dream-home come true. And remember: your home in Marin will protect you against inflation . . . be the best investment you ever made.

2. Professional Help: Your Marin County Realtor can help you find the right home, without headaches and heartaches. He is a professional who adheres to a strict Code of Ethics as a member of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. Call your Realtor today . . . start the ball rolling on the most valued purchase of your life.

3. Space for living

Your Realtor will show you a home big enough to take care of the present and probable future needs of your family, based on your own description of your wants and desires. He will consider many factors—number of rooms, arrangement, closets and storage space, adaptability of rooms for your special interests, porches, garden area, and the possibilities for expansion.

4. Economy and convenience

Size is a relative factor. In some cases, spaciousness is essential. In others, utility and space-saving devices make a compact home seem large. The livability of a home, more significant than the floor area, is determined by the facilities and equipment. Your Realtor will recommend to you a home that contains the features you want. If facilities you want are not present, he can determine whether they can be added within your home purchase budget.

5. Style and construction

Pleasantness and appropriateness for the site are the things that determine the "right" style of architecture for any home and your Realtor will show you one or more that are suitable. And whatever the style, he will find out the facts about construction, which will enable you to be sure that the home you buy will give long service and maintain its resale value.

6. Good location

By whatever standards you judge "location"—whether you mean convenience to schools, church and bus lines, or if you are more concerned about the attractiveness of the neighborhood or a good address—your Realtor can find you a home that answers your needs. He will think of all the details and everything that can affect the livability and future of the property.

7. Technical information

Your Realtor can tell you all the facts about homes available on the present market. He'll have answers to questions about taxes, assessments, and installation of gas, electricity and sewer lines. This information is important. It can't be had simply by looking at a property, but must be learned from official records.

8. Price and financing

Of course you want good value! And you want to avoid unnecessary red tape in buying your home. Your Realtor will help you on both scores. His policy is to sell only homes that are realistically priced, in line with the current market. When you tell him how much you intend to pay for your home, he can show you property that fits your budget. He can also suggest the easiest and most economical way to finance it through a lending agency, if you so desire.

Your Realtor is an expert who sees, studies, and sells many homes each year. He can save you time and money, and give you satisfaction by judging important values of homes currently available.

Cyclamen—Marin's Cool-Weather Favorite

And thus you are seeing with greater frequency these cool season charmers, in bloom from now well into the spring, seemingly sending up an endless succession of flowers.

There was a time when cyclamen was regarded as too tender for outdoor planting in most areas and was relegated to the lanai or indoors. Marinites, however, have learned better.

CYCLAMEN IS a much hardier plant than it was formerly credited with being. A frosty morning may cause its flowers to hang their heads. But by that same afternoon, they will perk up and be as exquisite as ever.

Massed to show off the spectacular color, cyclamen makes a valuable border plant. Tuck in a few plants in front of foundation shrubs, or spot several throughout the garden for color accent.

Use of this splendid performer is limited only by one's imagination.

In coastal gardens the plants will take more sun than inland, where planting under an eave or a tree affords needed partial shade. Having several pots of blooming cyclamen on hand will give you portable color for indoor use.

WHAT MAKES gardening with the plants so much fun is that they bloom and bloom and bloom.

Nurseries will have blooming pots of cyclamen available and will have them in nursery flats, too. The color selection ranges from shimmering whites to the deepest violet — with varying shades of cheery pinks, reds and lavenders.

When you consider the long-blooming season, unique and abundant flowers — in a tempting choice of colors — and the indoor-outdoor uses to which cyclamen can be put, is it any wonder that they are a cool season favorite with Marinites?

Dramatic Plant

For a dramatic single indoor display plant, try the bright yellow-green Asplenium or "bird's nest fern." Create the moisture and humidity this plant likes by setting its clay pot in a saucer of water. It will do well in household temperatures between 65 and 80 degrees. Keep it at low light intensity all day, away from direct sunlight.

CYCLAMEN, available now in pots or nursery flats, can be used both indoors or out for cool weather color, and will provide months of continuous bloom. (Photo courtesy of California Association of Nurserymen)

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✓ Look for a living Christmas tree now while the supply is good in the nurseries. These may be kept in containers for use during future holiday seasons.

✓ Christmas rose or helleborus is an excellent choice for cool weather bloom. Planted now, they will provide bloom soon after New Year's Day.

✓ Start crab grass control now. Ask your nurseryman about the commercial products that kill over-wintering seeds in lawns.

✓ Many trees, shrubs and vines will need pruning during the next two months. So arm yourself in advance with a good pruning manual — especially if fruit trees are involved. Your nurseryman will recommend a good book.

✓ Artichokes, asparagus and rhubarb will be available in bareroot form for planting this winter. Set aside space for them now. Besides the food they produce, their ornamental qualities are a great garden asset.

Here's How To Go About Bleaching Wood

Handyman's Page

Bleaching the wood is often the solution to this discouraging problem. It has the extra advantage of providing an even, light surface to which stain can be applied in the expectation of getting a uniform result.

In fact, old-time wood finishers used to bleach all wood preparatory to staining it, even when the ultimate goal was a dark color.

ALTHOUGH bleaching was practiced hundreds of years ago, it did not come into prominence in the United States until recent years along with the popularity of blond furniture and novelty finishes. Various kinds of home-made bleach mixtures were offered in do-it-yourself publications, but it is now generally recognized that commercial bleaches, available in hardware, paint and building supply stores, do a better job.

For one thing, they assure mixtures that have precise amounts of the necessary chemicals.

While the commercial bleaches are essentially the same, there are some slight differences according to the brand purchased.

IT IS IMPORTANT that the directions on the container be followed, especially those concerning the manner in which the wood surface should be washed after the bleach has dried. This rinsing guards against any possible adverse reaction of the bleaching material, which might continue to work chemically after the final finish has been applied and which might produce tiny bubbles.

About 24 hours after the bleaching and when the rinsing has been completed, the surface of the wood should be sanded lightly with a fine grade of paper. This is to remove any fuzziness or grain-raising that might have occurred.

The chemicals in bleaches make it necessary that all work be done while wearing rubber gloves. Work slowly and cautiously and, if any mixing is to done use glass or earthenware containers, never metal cans or pails.

BLEACHES DO not work on an old finish. They can be used only on raw wood or wood from which the original finish has been removed. And be sure to remove all hardware from the object being finished.

There are some products on the market which do not bleach the wood but lighten it without obscuring the grain. One of them may enable you to get the tone you desire.

A TINY KITCHEN seems double its size when the thrifty corridor plan is used, and when one end is a wall of glass that opens onto a deck outside. There is a continuation of resawn cedar siding boards on both interior and exterior wall surfaces. Gay colors, stark white flooring and appliances also expand the area.

THE CORRIDOR PLAN

Making A Kitchen Fit The Space

Faced with the problem of tucking a really good kitchen into a tiny space, most people throw up their hands.

Yet it can be done both attractively and economically.

The corridor plan is good when square footage is at a premium, for it provides a two-step working pattern, ample, well located counter space, and requires only an eight-foot width.

IN THE CORRIDOR plan, cabinets and counters are built along two parallel walls. Usually range and sink are opposite each other and centered to provide counter space on either side. The refrigerator goes at the end of one counter.

Eating space is best located beyond the work corridor, where it can utilize the full width of the kitchen.

FOR HIS OWN family, one interior designer boldly turned to red, white and blue — sky blue cabinets, clear red counters, and snow white appliances and flooring. After the first expression of astonishment, guests agree that the scheme is sheer delight and marvelously livable.

The side walls in the breakfast area are the saw textured cedar.

CREATING AN element of surprise, one cedar wall extends outdoors to form a windscreen for a tiny deck built off the breakfast area. The glass is set directly into the wall so that, with no framing member visible at the edge of the glass, the resawn panel baords reach without interruption from the home's interior to the outdoors.

At floor level outside. the little deck of fir two-by-fours on edge extends a pleasant invitation to breakfast in the sun.

Even in winter, it creates a delightful feeling of release that makes the hours spent in the tiny kitchen an always exciting experience.

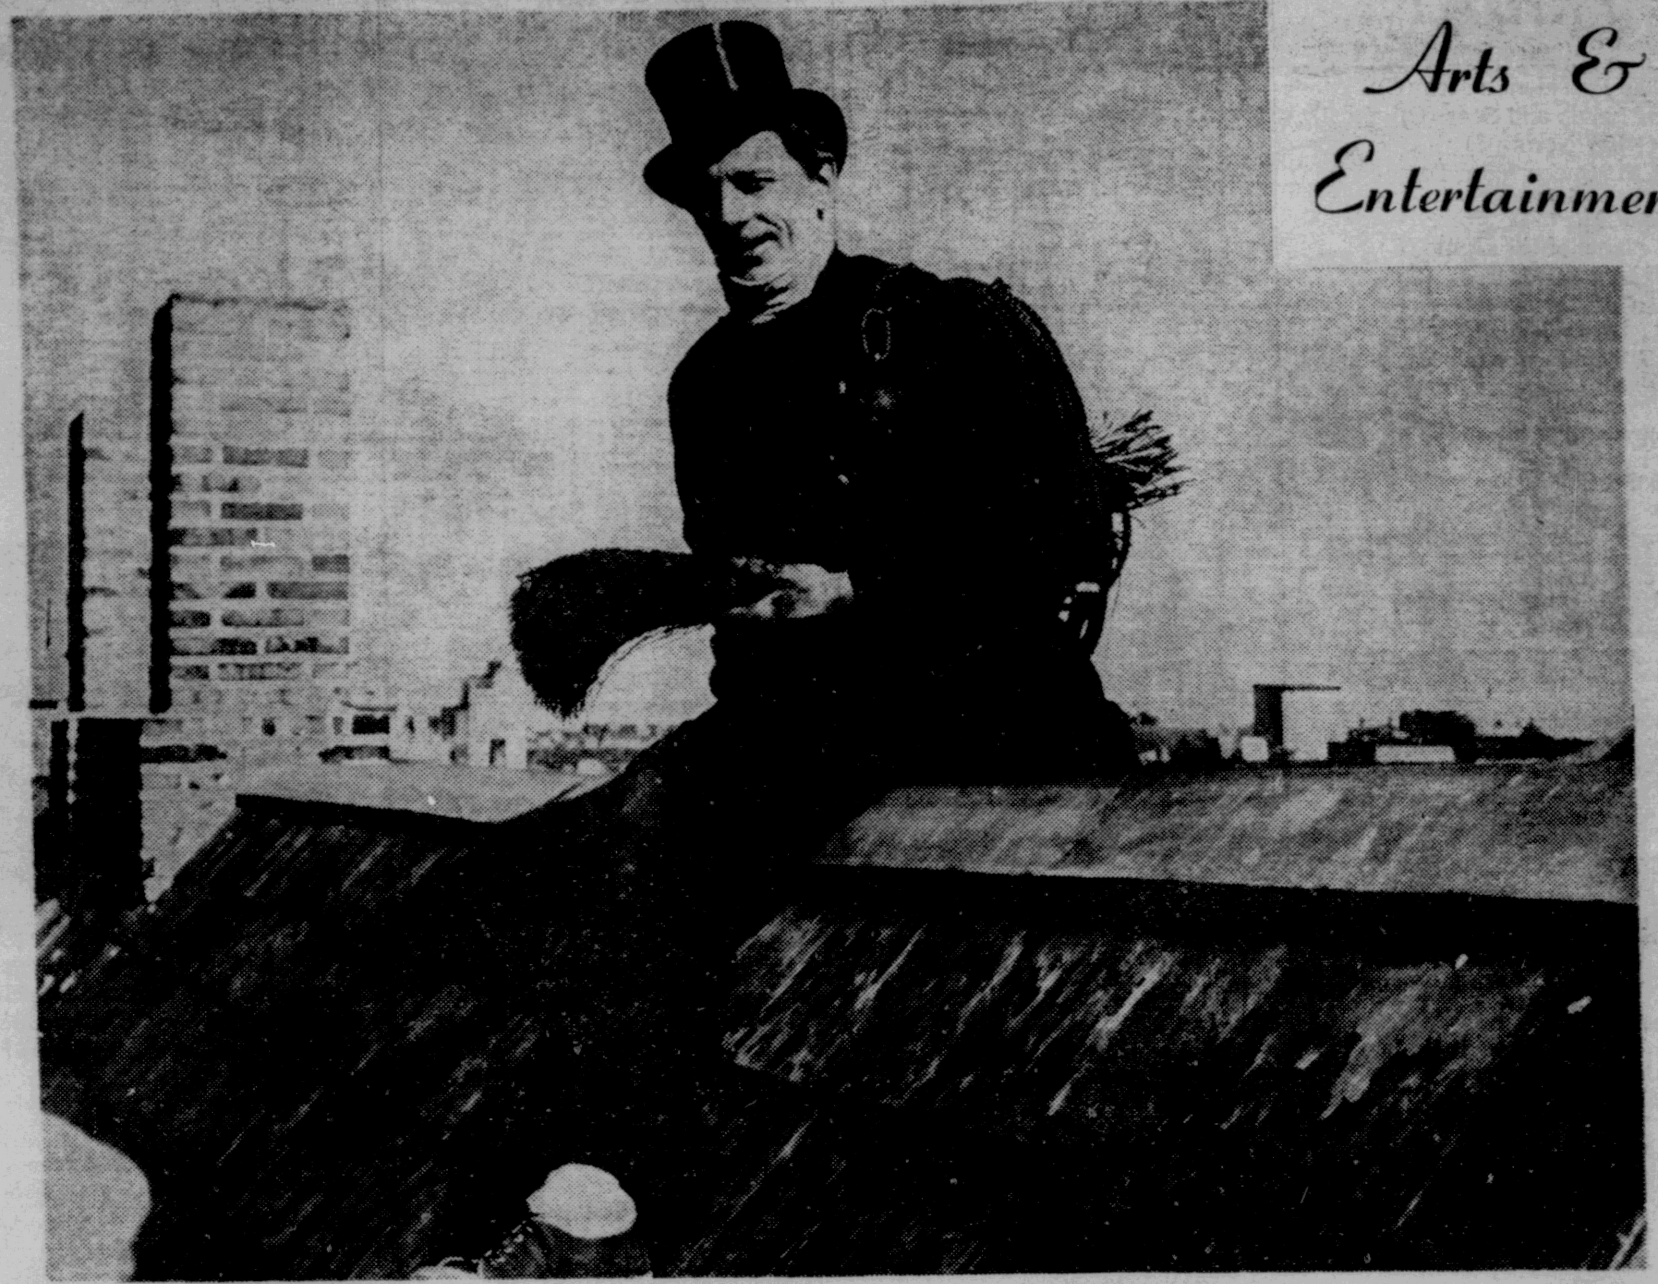
Arts & Entertainment



YES, THERE are still chimneysweeps, wearing stovepipe hats and clad in black, to be seen. And one of the places to see them is Denmark. This smiling sweep on a rooftop ready to go to work is from the two-hour color film, "Doing It Danish," to be shown by Arthur Wilson Monday at 8:15 p.m. in the auditorium of San Rafael High School as part of the Explorerama Series sponsored by the Explorers Club of San Francisco. The picture, produced by Wilson, covers both the old and new in Denmark and Greenland.

JOHN F. KENNEDY: IN MEMORIAM

Give him the sweetest sleep, the softest pillow
And smooth each line of worry from his brow,
Lay him to rest beneath the weeping willow
This warrior has earned his slumber now.

Here let his spirit part from him,
(Eternity receives him in his prime.)
Then with the Torch of Freedom, still undimmed,
Walk proudly down the corridors of Time!

MOONLIGHT ON BROWN HILLS

The skies are clear on most October nights.
The land is waiting for its white cov'ring.
When there is moonlight on the dark brown hills.
One can feel peace that comes with the year's end.

On a calm night the sky blazes with stars
The moon, queen of the ev'ning sky, now reigns.

The still peace broods over the moon-lit scene,
And cars travel through the dark of the night.

A silver moon gleams among the bright stars,
Its shining light reveals fences and barns,
Winter ahead; snow and sleet then will come,
But moonlight, now, on dark hills still shines.
